GODEY'S FASHIONS FOR OCTOBER

In 1886 an afternoon caller wore a purple velvet dress trimmed with silk galloons. Her hostess was gowned in gray silk banded with cardinal; two walking dresses were of brown cashmere and myrtle green silk, respectively, while a ball gown was a creation involving white silk damask and plain blue—so the noted Mr. Godey tells us in his Ladey's Book.

1921 Fashions have a new language entirely. Tailored suits are mentioned in terms of mousyne, mouchatex and veldyne, gowns favor kaska, chiffon velvet and silk velvet, and even colors are wearing new names—fuschia, Sorrenta and beige, for instance. What a silken softness clothes a modern woman in comparison with the stays and haircloth, featherboning and stiff brocades of that period around 1886.

Reminiscing is a pleasant, often corrective habit of old establishments.

Past aspirations explain present achievements, past mistakes determine future policies.

The confidence which this store has held intact for thirty-five years is the more valuable in that public approval is so easily undermined—a single dissatisfied customer can influence a score of opinions.

This anniversary sale is a reminder that Thompson-Belden Merchandise is new, beautiful, dependable and surprisingly low in price at all times.

—and in consideration of the years of experience in judging style and quality—the years of fair dealing and friendly service which have gone into the building of your confidence in this store, we feel justified in inviting you to participate in our observance of this Thirty-Fifth Anniversary.

To make Friends, we know that it is necessary to make sacrifices. No good friends were ever made without them.

—and so, as an appreciation to our old friends and an invitation to new ones, this Anniversary Sale is presented with the knowledge that its offerings are genuinely good.
