

Guides Rescue Half Frozen Lad In Dense Forest

Deer Hunter Wanders in Blinding Adirondack Snow Storm for 30 Hours Before Found.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Lost in the treacherous Safford Pond forest, 10 miles from Eagle bay, in the Adirondacks for two days and a night, Wells F. Wise, a freshman at Syracuse university, was found exhausted and half frozen, propped against a tree, by two Adirondack guides.

Wandering aimlessly about in a circle in a blinding snowstorm for more than 30 hours, Wise kept fighting his way through the tree maze until exhausted, he huddled, half frozen, in a clump of bushes beneath a great pine.

Wise left here to hunt deer. Unfamiliar with the mountains, he wandered from the beaten trails of the deer stavers when he came across a fresh deer trail in the falling snow.

When he failed to return at nightfall, hunters Big Moose became worried and organized a searching party. Three posses, led by guides and carrying pitch flares, searched all night without success. They continued beating down the underbrush the next day. That afternoon Wise was found against the pine tree far up on the side of the mountain.

The guides carried the freshman for several miles, as he was unable to walk. He declared he had given up hope of rescue and had propped himself against the tree when his knees froze stiff, fearing if he laid down he would not be able to rise.

A great buck with 10-point antlers was found in the brush which Wise had tracked and killed before he discovered he was lost.

Congress to Be Busy On Tariff Next Month

 schedule will continue for at least a week and probably more. Until the tax bill is finally disposed of hearings will be interrupted to a considerable extent.

Sugar Interests Busy.
 During the former hearings the committee passed over schedule five, applying to sugar, and schedule six, relating to tobacco. The Cuban sugar interests have been conducting a campaign against the continuance of the increased duty on sugar which was made effective with the emergency tariff act and which is retained in the permanent bill. There also are features of the tobacco schedule which have caused opposition.

Several other important schedules remain to be considered. Schedule 8, applying to spirits, wines, and other beverages, can be disposed of in short order, but schedule 9 on cotton manufactures will open up a controversy, the New England cotton manufacturers insisting that they have not been taken care of adequately. Schedule 10, on flax, hemp and jute, will require some time, and the schedule 11 on wool and manufactures of wool will need a lengthy discussion. Neither wool growers nor manufacturers are satisfied with the wool schedule as it now stands. Schedule 12, relating to silk and silk goods, also has occasioned considerable criticism.

Schedule 13 relates to papers and books, while schedule 14 deals with sundries. In connection with the schedule on sundries, moving picture producers will urge that the duty imposed in the house bill on foreign films be eliminated.

Hubby Gets Writ To Get Overcoat From His Wife

"It's the Only Way," He Tells Constable—Wife Objects, But the Law Prevails.

Frank J. Reed, jeweler employed by the Ryan Jewelry company, felt the need of an overcoat yesterday, as well as of his winter suit and other things. They were in the home of himself and his wife, Blanche, 3026 Davenport street.

He came to municipal court yesterday and got a writ of replevin. "It's the only way I can get them," he said.

Frank J. Reed filed suit for divorce from Blanche Reed in district court last Wednesday, charging her with extreme cruelty. They were wedded in Omaha, September 18, 1920.

Constable Fred W. McGinnis went with the husband to the home and took away these things: One new overcoat, one old overcoat, one suit, three shirts, one revolver, one silver brush, one hair brush, one silver ash tray, one small table, 200 kodak pictures and a trunk.

The constable reported that husband and wife had "heated words" at the house, but nothing more serious. Mrs. Reed declined to divulge the cause of their differences.

Knights Templar and Students Gipsy's Guests

While the big choir of the Gipsy Smith revival sang "Onward Christian Soldiers," 300 Knights Templar in full uniform, boys representing the Omaha chapter of the Order of DeMolay; students of Omaha high schools and other educational institutions marched into the Auditorium Friday night and took seats, reserved for them, on the first floor.

The Knights marched on the Masonic Temple in the driving rain. The school students formed in lines outside the Auditorium and waited patiently, in spite of the rain, until they were permitted to enter.

Several college and high school youths were given for the evangelist and the knights.

In the announcements preceding the service the Rev. C. E. Cobbe declared that men and women from several adjacent states had signed pledge cards.

The cards, passed out Thursday night asking for pledges of financial aid brought the total for the services to $10,210.

The entire meeting last night was devoted to the young people.

"You are the future life and power of the city," the evangelist told them. At the close of the meeting when they were asked to consecrate themselves to Jesus, the entire membership of the DeMolay, Order of De Molay and nurses training schools from hospitals of the city.

As he finished his address and was about to dismiss the gathering, Gipsy Smith announced that the students had requested him to sing. He did so, first singing "Who Could It Be But Jesus." The youngsters asked for more and he sang, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say."

The Rev. E. M. Brown, pastor of Dietz Memorial Church, offered an inspiring prayer, preceding the service, which was an invocation for aid and guidance to the young people attending the services.

As the evangelist arose to read his text and preach from that, he suddenly launched into a heart-to-heart talk with the young people. The older folk were excluded entirely. He told the young people present that with their educational advantages, their good home influences and the advanced intelligence of the times, each one of them could be a power for good in the world.

He directed them on the course of happiness and the clean life, and the value of giving a young life to Christ before it had been contaminated by worldly sins and vice.

From time to time he turned to the Knights Templar and older folk for confirmation of his remarks.

The special delegations at the meeting represented the following: Central, Commerce and South High schools, the college of medicine of the University of Nebraska, Boyles Business college, Knights Templar, Order of De Molay and nurses training schools from hospitals of the city.

Yesterday was rest day for the evangelistic party.

Rail Executives Will Press Pay Cuts on Employes

Executives Announce Intention of Pushing Request for 10 Per Cent Reduction With Labor Board.

By RALPH J. MCANNA.
 Chicago, Oct. 29.—Peace reigns in railway circles, but the issues which threatened war are yet to be disposed of.

Following action of the brotherhood chiefs in canceling the strike order late Thursday, the strike of 600 trainmen of the International & Great Northern railroad, operating in Texas, was called off yesterday by the general chairman of the road, according to a telegram received by W. G. Lee, chief of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Less than 12 hours later, however, railroad executives declared their intention to press the 10 per cent additional wage reduction proposal, which, added to other grievances, provoked the walkout order.

"Our program for the immediate future, as announced October 14, remains unchanged," said Samuel M. Felton, president of the Chicago, Great Western railway, and chairman of the Western Railroad Executives committee. "Only a further reduction of wages will restore productivity."

Samuel O. Dun, editor of the Railway Age, supported this contention. "No Surprise to Unions."

But the plans of the railroads as thus revealed seemingly were no surprise to the heads of the "Big Five" brotherhoods. They said they had expected such announcements but were resting easy in what they believed to be assurance from the United States railroad labor board that no action will be taken for some time, and the pledge of railway executives not to move without authority of the board, added to the sense of security, the union chiefs said.

Work of Planning Board Is Praised

Milwaukee Realtor and Banker Confer With Local Realty Men.

Edward Grieb, Milwaukee realtor, and C. B. Whitnall, banker of Milwaukee, praised the Omaha city planning work after a two-day visit here Thursday and Friday.

Mr. Grieb and Mr. Whitnall, accompanied by J. E. Harris of the Milwaukee Journal, were guests of the city planning board in Omaha and were entertained at noon Friday by the Building Owners' and Managers' association.

Following their meeting with the Building Owners' and Managers' association, they held a conference with President Glover of the Omaha Real Estate board relative to the methods of appraising property for the city of Milwaukee.

In Milwaukee there is a law which permits the planning commission to purchase condemned property for cash within 500 feet of the proposed development. After these purchases are made, the city resells the portion of the property not used in the development, according to Mr. Grieb and always makes money on the transaction.

An Extraordinary Sale of Women's and Misses' Dresses

For Afternoon and Street Wear

These higher cost dresses have been selected from our regular stock and marked down to a figure that is phenomenally low, especially when style, quality and workmanship are considered.

1950

These fashionable dresses of Silk Canton Crepe, Crepe Satin, Georgette Crepe, Tricotine, Poirer Twill or effective combinations are extremely attractive and appropriate for afternoon and street wear. Many are simple in line and treatment, while others are ornately trimmed with elaborate bead, silk and tinsel embroidery.

Again we say that the values are deserving of your attention, as it is probable that another opportunity of such values will hardly be repeated.

Free List Causes Trouble.

Numerous controversies are involved in the consideration of the free list, which will be taken up at the schedules are completed. Among the questions on which numerous witnesses will be heard are the placing of hides, leather and shoes on the dutiable list and the imposition of a duty on crude petroleum. Efforts to have these transferred from the free list proved unsuccessful in the house, but will be renewed in the senate. The controversy over the removal of lumber from the free list also will be renewed in the senate.

After title I containing the dutiable list, and title II, applying to the free list, have been disposed of in the hearings, the committee will take up title III, containing special provisions relating to reciprocal trade relations and title IV, containing administrative provisions. Title III provides three methods by which tariff concessions may be made by the United States in return for favorable treatment of American goods by other countries.
