

Commissioner Makes Ruling On Oil Stations

New Revenue Law Applies to Retail Rather Than Wholesale Companies, Osborne Declares.

Lincoln, Oct. 31.—(Special)—The term "oil distributing station" as it appears in the new revenue law of Nebraska is construed by State Tax Commissioner Osborne to mean "filling stations," where automobiles and other motor vehicles are supplied, and not the central tank stations of companies, where oil is received by carload, stored and afterward reshipped by rail.

Mr. Osborne announced, following a conference with Attorney H. H. Herdman and H. W. Piermont of Omaha, that he would investigate the business of oil filling stations over the state in order to ascertain the proper divisor to be recommended to all Nebraska assessors as a basis on which those concerns should be assessed, on average capital.

Under the old revenue laws, grain dealers were assessed on average capital, instead of their property on hand April 1. The average capital was determined as a general practice by taking the entire business done during the year and dividing it by 36. This was the theory they had made a turnover every ten days on an average and that their capital was thus used 36 times in the course of a year.

In enacting the new law, the legislature extended this method of assessment to cover oil distributing stations, beet sugar factories, and some other lines of business. In the case of oil stations, a larger divisor than 36 will be used, as it is assumed that they make more frequent turnovers than grain elevators do.

Rum Runners Fined In Federal Court; To Face Judge Again

John Auld and Jack Murphy, bootleggers arrested in Grand Island last week, and who admitted rum-running from Canada was their "business," pleaded guilty to illegal possession of liquor before Federal Judge Woodrough, yesterday, and were fined $10 each.

They have already paid $100 fines on a state charge at Grand Island. But their reckoning is not yet over. Today they will appear before Judge Woodrough again to answer to the charge of illegal sale.

Auld and Murphy are the two in whose possession were found lists of prominent "customers" in over a dozen Nebraska towns.

Police Searching for Missing Bond Salesman

Paul Hutchinson, youthful bond salesman, employed by the Harry A. Koch company, until several weeks ago, when he disappeared from the city, is now sought by detectives for bonding companies, President Koch said yesterday.

Hutchinson, who served in France during the war, left many unpaid bills and a shortage in the Koch company's accounts, said Mr. Koch. Hutchinson's wife returned to Omaha after her husband disappeared, and offered to pay all claims, but she, too, has now disappeared, according to Mr. Koch.

Salvation Army Will Assist Unemployed

Brigadier William Andrews has offered Mayor Dahlman the Salvation Army's facilities here in relieving unemployment, especially that of ex-service men.

The brigadier suggests that the army's corps building at 1711 Davenport street might be used as an emergency city employment bureau. The drive for $42,000 for the Salvation Army's various activities in Omaha began yesterday morning and will continue all this week.

John McCormack Sings for November Victor Record

John McCormack, Jascha Heifetz, Mme. Alda, Amelita Galli-Curci and Fritz Kreisler are some of the supreme artists who have new offerings in the November releases of Victor records.

John McCormack sings "Little Town in the Old County Down." At the climax of the record, the voice lifts a sudden octave into a sweet, high, clearly sustained head-note.

The new fox trots include "South Sea Isles," a curious intermingling of sadness and humor, jingling combinations with echoes of far-off love songs. This is by Paul Whiteman's orchestra.
