Entertainment For Temple Israel Visitors

The return of Rabbis William Rosenau of Baltimore, Leo M. Franklin of Detroit and Abram Simon of Washington, D. C., and their wives to Omaha the week end of November 18-20, on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of Temple Israel, will be inspiration for a number of social events.

Mrs. Rosenau is a former Omaha girl, a daughter of Myer Hellman, pioneer Omahan; and Mrs. Franklin, too, spent her youth here. She was Miss Oberfelder of a family now prominent in the western part of the state.

First of the festivities will be a luncheon Friday at the Athletic club at which Mr. David Rosencock will be host. That evening, Isidor Zeigler, president of the Temple Israel board, and Mrs. Ziegler will serve a dinner of 50 covers at the Blackstone.

Recitation of Kiddush and lighting of Sabbath candles, a picturesque ceremony in Jewish homes to usher in the Sabbath, will be observed at this dinner as a pretty feature, in deference to the visiting rabbis.

Saturday noon, Temple Israel sisterhood, headed by Mrs. Nita Mantel, will give a luncheon for the ladies; that afternoon, there will be a reception at the home of Mrs. Samuel Wertheimer and in the evening, a dinner-dance at the Fontenelle hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Morris Levy will conclude the entertainment with a dinner at their home Sunday.

Mrs. Simon is head of the national organization of Temple Sisterhoods.

Assists at Bazar

Mrs. John Sanders

Mrs. John Sanders, vice president of the alumnae of the Sisters of Mercy, will have charge of the country store, a feature of the bazaar, which will be given under the auspices of the alumnae association Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week at the Midway Dancing academy, 1716 Dodge street. Proceeds will be added to the building fund of the new convent and riding school to be erected soon in Fairacres.

A noon day luncheon will be served during the bazaar from 12 until 2 o'clock.

Heads Candle Club

Miss Jenny Kalina has been elected president of the Candle club, an organization which does friendly work among the younger girls. The club is to open and maintain a club room in the Green building, and plans to start a circulating library and reading circle for discussion. Each member will be asked to contribute one book of her favorite author. The club has 128 members and any girl wishing to make more friends is welcome.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"Can you settle a question that is making my sweetheart and me utterly miserable?" writes Dick. "We're not engaged, because we're both young and I have a lot to accomplish in the line of getting my business on its feet before I'll feel that I have a right to ask any girl to marry me. But we both know that in another year we'll be looking around for a little home."

"Now the question is this: 'I'm not called on to work at night, but there are a lot of opportunities for me to go to meetings in connection with my work, and there are some study clubs I like to attend. Moreover, I belong to an amateur orchestra which meets once a week and from which I get a lot of satisfaction and enjoyment.'"

"So I don't see my sweetheart more than once during the week, and if I spend Saturday evening with her, I go home Sunday to stay the day with my folks in the country, while if Molly and I plan a Sunday together, I run up home Saturday evening and spend Sunday with my mother. I think I'm doing right. But Molly says if I really cared for her I'd give her all my time."

"And she thinks of breaking off with me unless I see my way clear to be with her all my spare time. I love her, but I feel she's all wrong about this. Only I don't know how to convince her of it. Do you think there's any argument I can put up?"

Dick's letter strikes me as important because it is one of several along similar lines which have come to me during the last few days. And mixed in with the masculine pleas to be set straight with girls who are hurt at a lack of devotion come the feminine pleas to make masculine persons realize that a chap owes it to his sweetheart to give her enough of his time and attention to make it interesting for her. Hence's Grace's letter to offset Dick's:

"My engagement isn't announced, but as soon as business settles down I'm going to be engaged to a young man of whom I think the world. But I'm far from happy because he doesn't bother about me the way I think he should. He devotes his time to everything but me, and the girl he's supposed to love, and I'm hurt more often than I can say."

"He always seems to have excuses about seeing his brother in business, and having a conference and having to make a business trip. Yet he says he loves me. What do you think of a man who won't neglect other interests rather than see the girl he loves setting at home?"

Now while I sympathize heartily with the disappointed girl who finds that having a man's love doesn't assure her of his constant attentions, I realize that as long as there are such things in the world as business and ambition and the need of making a living, the situation can't be bettered much. About all that can be done for it is to bring a certain large, calm sanity to the feminine viewpoint.

Love and marriage aren't picnics or holidays or merrymaking occasions. They are the serious business of life. A man doesn't lose all desire to get ahead in the world because he's in love. And if he did, who would sooner feel ashamed of him and suffer more because of him than his wife?

The woman who truly loves must teach herself to share a man's ambitions. Her love must urge him up—not down. She must have more in her own life than the clinging-vine attitude.

But the man, on the other hand, must make sure that his absorption in his own viewpoints and goals doesn't deny him the breadth of vision which would enable him to
