Governor Tells Advantages of Capitol Junket

McKelvie Answers Attacks Made on Plan for Trip to See Plans-Says Money Will Be Saved.

Lincoln, Nov. 21,-(Special.)-Attacks on the expense involved in the trip of the state capitol commission to New York December 9, to view final plans of Architect Goodhue for the new $5,000,000 state house were met by Governor McKelvie with the following statement. A trip to Lincoln by Goodhue with final plans for approval of the com-mission would necessitate bringing at least four expert technical engineers to Lincoln to bring before the commission in full every detail of the METROPOLITAN

The first ship to east. Walter Head, another memsail under the agreement is the ship- ber of the commission, is going east ping board steamer Oppis, scheduled on personal business and will sandwich the examination of the state house plans in during that visit. He will pay for the trip out of his own money, leaving only three members who will draw expenses from the state capitol commission fund. Governor McKelvie stated that the contract for the basement and foundation probably would be awarded in March and work on it would begin during the summer.

The contract for the superstructure, he asserted, would be delayed as long as possible in order to get every benefit possible by the falling in price of materials and labor.

"I think I am safe in saying that the work on the superstructure will begin a year from next spring," the governor said.

> Romance in Origin Of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING. Amber.

Of the many mystic qualities which were formerly supposed to pertain to amber its potency as a charm against rheumatism appears to be about the only one which survives in popular superstition. But a belief in this quality persists with remarkable vitality and is defended by persons whom one would least suspect of such credulity. Henry Ward Beecher always carried about with him a string of amber beads to cure or to ward off his rheumatic attacks; and amber set as jewelry is still sold in London for the cure of this malady. Only a few years ago amber had a much more prominent place in therapeutics. In 1865 the Rev. C. W. King, in his "Natural History of Precious Stones" wrote: That the wearing of an amber necklace will keep off an attack of erysipelas has been proved by experiments beyond the possibility of a doubt." Oil of amber still has a place in the U. S. dispensatory and perhaps there still exist some oldtime doctors who use it medicinally,

The ancients, who attached mystic qualities to all sorts of precious and semi-precious stones, were not likely to neglect amber; that strange substance born of the sea and of the color of yellow sunlight. The Romans used to place in their mortuary urns pieces of amber and jet, the jet symbolizing the darkness of death and the amber the light of immortality. Possibly the black stone was an offering to Plute and the yellow Just being completed and is without doubt the most complete small house we have ever erected. The reverence with which the ancients regarded amber was increased by the discovery of its electrical properties. Dr. Kunz says: "The electric property of amber was remarked as early as 600 B. C. by the Ionic philosopher, Thales, and from this observation may be dated the study of electric phenomena. (Copyright, 1921, by The McClure News-paper Syndicate.)

Parents' Problems

How can boys and girls be taugh to do errands correctly?

The best method, when sending a boy or girl on an errand, is to write down the place to which the child is to go and the thing or things to be done there, and give the paper to the child.
