

SLEEPY TIME TALES THE TALE OF HENRIETTA HEN

BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER XXI Off for the Fair.

It seemed to Henrietta Hen that the time for the fair would never come. She had begun to feel some what uneasy, because she had talked so much about visiting the fair with her children that it would be very awkward if she didn't go.

The news spread like fire in sun-dried grass. Henrietta Hen took pains that it should. She told everybody she saw that she expected to leave at any moment. And she began to say good-bye to all her friends. Since Henrietta didn't start for the fair that day, before nightfall she had bade everyone farewell at least a dozen times. And when the following dawn, Henrietta started the day not by saying, "Good morning!" but by bidding her neighbors "Good-bye" once more, they began to think her a bit tiresome.

What! Haven't you gone yet? they asked her.

"What! Haven't you gone yet?" they asked her. "No! But I expect to leave any moment," Henrietta told them. She was so excited that she couldn't eat her breakfast. But her chicks had no such trouble. And perhaps it was just as well that Henrietta Hen had her hands full looking after them and trying to keep them all under her eye, and spick-and-span for the journey. Otherwise she would have been in more of a flutter than she was.

While Henrietta had an eye on her children, she tried to keep the other on the barn. And after what seemed to her hours of watching and waiting, she saw Johnnie Green for the old horse, Ebenezer, out of the door, with his harness on. Henrietta promptly forgot her stately manners. She ran squalling across the farmyard and called to Ebenezer, "Where are you going?"

"I understand that I'm going to the fair," he told her, as Johnnie Green backed him between the thills of the wagon. "Once I would have been hitched to a light buggy, with a sulky tied behind it. But now I've got to take you and your family in this rattly old contraption."

Henrietta Hen didn't wait to hear any more. She turned and hurried back to gather her youngsters and bid everybody another farewell. Amid a great clucking and squawking, Johnnie Green and his father put Henrietta and her chicks into the pen and placed it in the back of the wagon.

"We're all ready!" Henrietta cried to Ebenezer. The old horse didn't even turn his head, for he could see backwards as well as forwards, because he wore no blinkers. He made no direct reply to Henrietta, though he gave a sort of a grunt, as if the whole affair did not please him. He knew that it was a long distance to the fair grounds and the road was hilly.

"She thinks it a lark," he said to the dog Spot, who hung about as if he were waiting for something. "She's lucky, for she won't have to go on her own legs for miles and miles."

"That's just what I intend to do," Spot informed him. "They don't seem to take me. But I'm going to follow you. The wagon is the way where Johnnie Green and his father can't see me."

So they started off. And they had scarcely passed through the gate when Henrietta began to clamor in her shrillest tones. "No body put any heel to her! The wagon is clattering off down the road. And old dog Spot smiled to himself as he trotted along beneath it.

"Henrietta just remembered that she forgot to put on her best apron," he chuckled.

Saturday Bride

Miss Dorothy Adkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Adkins, became the bride of David Hervey Saturday afternoon at St. Martin's Episcopal church.

A reception and buffet supper followed at the Adkins home for the family and intimate friends. The bride wore a blue duvety traveling suit and cerise velvet hat and carried a bouquet of red roses. Herman Hart was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Hervey will be at home in Omaha after December 15.

(Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.)

Why is Smith So Eager? The motor car of Dr. Moss did not fulfill his prediction of making trouble, and it was but a few minutes before we were back in front of the inn where the wounded trooper lay.

But the grounds presented a far different appearance than when we left. A number of saddled horses were tied to the trees in the front yard, and a trooper was patrolling in front of the inn, while his comrades were gathered around the table upon which the wounded boy had been laid.

The scene revealed by the windows was so dramatic, so cinematic, that I almost pinched myself to be sure that I was not dreaming my own part in the affair. As the physician's motor and our car turned into the driveway the patrol flashed to the door, and shouted something, evidently an announcement of the physician's coming, and the men around the table came toward us.

The tall figure of the man Smith was in the lead with a trooper who evidently was an officer of the detachment, and he was talking to me restfully to him. Suddenly I felt I must hear what he was saying, and I slipped my motor key into my pocket, felt of the precious little badge Lillian had given me, and spoke crisply to Bess Dean.

"Please let me pass you, Bess." "Why? Are you going in there?" she obeyed me, nevertheless, and walked by my side as I went up the path. Dicky was close behind us, and I heard a single word from his lips, muttered in a tone so low that I almost missed it.

"Steady!" "You want to be careful of this physician," I heard Smith mutter as I came past him. "He is not a surgeon, while the man from Kingston is. Better wait I think."

"That Proves Nothing." "He will be dead by the time the Kingston man gets here," the officer returned obstinately. "And Dr. Moss is very good, everybody says. We'll see what he thinks. By the way, those folks came back. I told you they would."

There was triumph in the young officer's voice, and I realized that while he might agree with Smith that appearances were against us, he was not apt to adopt the implacable prejudice which the tall man was palpably cherishing. I had seen Smith's type in action many times—let a man of that sort get an idea or a prejudice into his mind and he is as tenacious of it as a bulldog is of a good neck grip. He appears to folk last Saturday, where they were the guests of Miss Beatty's brother-in-law, Grant McFayden. Miss Brossard left this morning for her home, where she was called unexpectedly to attend the wedding of her sister.

Things You'll Love To Make Choosing Partners for Thanksgiving Dinner

An interesting and exciting way of choosing partners for a Thanksgiving dinner is to make a large pumpkin of orange crepe paper. Fill it with small fruit or vegetable-shaped pin cushions. You can buy the frame for the pumpkin or make one yourself. It consists of a wooden board with eight wires nailed to it and bent into the shape of the pumpkin. Pad very slightly with cotton and cover with the paper. Before twisting and tying the paper around the stem at the top, place inside the pumpkin the cushions with a ribbon tied to each. Let the ribbon hang out over the sides. Now make bookmarks of heavy paper or thin cardboard similar to the one shown in the illustration.

Have a head on each bookmark to match one of the cushions. The tie is cut around on three sides to go over the page of the book. Give the gentlemen the bookmarks. Each lady pulls one of the ribbons. The gentleman has as partner the lady who draws a fruit or vegetable to match the one on his bookmark.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has pensioned Mrs. Louise Madison of York, Pa., as a reward of her 30 years of faithful service to the company. She is now past 65 years of age.

Don't Neglect a Cold Mothers, don't let colds get underway at the first cough or snuffle. Rub Musterole on the throat and chest. Musterole is a pure, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. It draws out congestion, relieves soreness, does all the work of the good old-fashioned mustard plaster in a gentle way, without the blister.

Keep your feet for all emergencies, it may prevent pneumonia in your home. 35c and 65c in jars and tubes; hospital size, $3.

Jewel, Flower, Color Symbols for Today

By MILDRED MARSHALL.

Amber is the talisman against sorrow today. According to the ancient Greek poets, the grains of amber were the tears annually shed over the death of their brother Phaethon by the Helades, after grief had changed them into poplars, growing on the banks of the Eridanus.

Thus no more charmingly poetic stone could be chosen for wear than the amber, and for that reason it is well suited as a gift. For those whose birth anniversary this is, the coral is the natal stone. It should always be worn. For its brilliant color makes it conspicuous, if the wearer wishes to secure the full benefits of its power to bring good health and long life.

Dark blue is today's significant color. Those who wear it will be granted any favor for which they ask, according to ancient superstition. The purple pansy is today's special flower.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $1.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and sugar. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2 1/2 ounces of Pine in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and tastes very pleasant.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and raspy or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pine and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pine is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs. Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pine" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Where It Started

Cricket. This game, the national sport of England and very popular even in the United States, seems to have originated before Elizabeth's time. It was probably at first merely a game in which a ball was hit with a short staff (cricket), and the runners were not out till later.

The first mention of the game is in an ancient affidavit made by John Derrick of Guildhall in Elizabeth's reign.

Miss Kate St. George, who 50 years ago completed the first pair of overalls sold in the United States is to be pensioned by the firm which she began work with at that time.

Avoid Constipation And Enjoy Health

Constipation is a real burden, destroying health and hindering pleasure of all kinds. For this reason a prescription was tested and tried out and subsequently put in tablet form. It is called Dilaxin, and it permanently relieves the most stubborn cases of constipation. People who have tried Dilaxin say that "old axiom 'There is Nothing New Under the Sun' is all wrong. They say that Dilaxin is new."

You will soon see that Dilaxin gives natural action and is a just regulator and not a purge, and contains nothing that is habit-forming. It contains the necessary elements to correct constipation and to stimulate. It keeps the intestinal tract in a healthy state, which promotes good health.

If you are constipated or if you have torpid liver, take Dilaxin. It is a safe, reliable, and effective remedy. All druggists all over the world sell Dilaxin at fifty cents a box. The sole distributor is the Marmola Co., 17 Garfield Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Newsletters and billboards already are publishing advertisements telling of Dilaxin, and it is only a matter of time before Dilaxin will be recognized as constipation's biggest enemy. Use Dilaxin as directed, and you will agree that it is remarkable.

Common Sense

By J. J. MUNDTY. Making Friendly Enemies.

It may be that your desire to be popular, what stands in the way of your further advancement in the business firm with which you are affiliated.

There are too many men who dare not express an opinion or do an original thing for fear it may be misconstrued.

They desire the good-will of everyone in their department and they want their associates to approve, and so they go through life in a perfectly colorless way so they will not antagonize others.

Now, a successful director or executive, while he may be kind and just to his men, in order to be fair to the firm must insist that each person employed do as the firm wishes at all times. This insistence on the carrying out of the head's wishes may result in hard feelings, for the one who comes in for a reprimand does not always see the justice of censure. If you would rise to the top with your employers and be a good leader, I must have the courage of your convictions.
