Circle 8 of the woman's division, First Presbyterian church, Thirty-fourth and Farnam streets will hold a food sale Saturday, beginning at 9 a. m. in the church parlors. Mrs. Arthur J. Cooley and Mrs. George F. Johnston will be in charge of the affair.

Movie at Yates School.

A motion picture, "The Secret Garden," starring Lila Lee, will be shown in the auditorium of Henry W. Yates school Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher association. The picture is taken from Frances Hodgson Burnett's book of the same name, a story for children. A scenic picture, "Colorado Plateau," and "Adventures of Bob and Bill," a Boy Scout picture, will also be shown.

Congressman JEFFERIS Speaks.

Congressman A. W. Jeffers spoke at a tea Wednesday afternoon in the Brandeis private dining room to a group of women interested in the maternity bill and the opening of the peace congress. Mrs. Draper Smith presided.

Luncheon and Bridge Club.

The members of a new bridge and luncheon club met for the first time Tuesday at the home of Miss Winifred Smith. The club has culinary ambitions as well as liking for bridge, and the luncheon is served at the bi-weekly meetings by four of the eight members in turn. Each of the four is responsible for one course. The members of the club include the Mesdames Lester Klopp, Byrne Holmquist, Richard Malloy, Herbert Negle, the Misses Ruth Carter, Gwendolyn Wolfe, Winifred Smith, Winifred Brandt. The next meeting will be December 21 with Mrs. Klopp.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON. There is no surer test of a man than the pronouns he uses in his conversation. If he harps on the first person singular you can put him down as a four flusher. The Johnnie who corners you and tells you—

All about the way he revolutionized the office force—
All about the way he told the boss where to head in—
All about the jealousy at the lodge that keeps him out of a chair—
All about the big job he did last week—
All about the way Smith & Co. have gone to the dogs since he "reigned from the force"—
All about his superior car
And his superior dog
And his superior tennis voice
And how he won the war—
The lad's a two-spot.
The Jane who calls you up at 9

m. just when you're busiest and tells you—
How everyone raved over her last night at the dance—
How many proposals she received—
How young Perkins is killing himself by inches because she rejected him—
How her hair dresser says she has the most beautiful and unusual hair—
How her doctor says she has the most marvelous and unusual psychic constitution—
How everyone knows she has the most marvelous and unusual psychic power—
How—
But what's the use? By their pronouns shall you know them, and heat it while the heating's good. (Copyright by George Matthew Adams)

H. S. Daniel Loans Library to Ralston

Eleven hundred books, including standard fiction and reference books, have been loaned to the new Ralston public library for a period of three years by Herbert S. Daniel, retiring acting postmaster, through the efforts of Judge J. W. Woodruff. The formal opening of the library, sponsored by the Ralston Woman's club, Mrs. C. M. Skinner, president, will take place Saturday afternoon and evening. Story telling will be a feature of the afternoon program, which will be devoted to the children, and a musical program will be given during the evening. The library is located temporarily in the office of the Homeward Realty company. Until a librarian is appointed members of the woman's club will be in charge under direction of Mrs. O. J. Mills, chairman. Books are being purchased by the woman's club with funds raised by entertainments and food sales. The club has its own motion picture machine and movies are given every Friday evening for the benefit of the library fund. A runnagage sale will be conducted Thursday at Twenty-fourth and Q streets, under direction of Mrs. L. M. Lord, president of the second district, Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs, for the benefit of the library fund and club fund. Some credit is due members of the Ralston Woman's club for their untiring efforts in securing the library. A library building is the aim of the club.

Officers of the club are: Mrs. C. M. Skinner, president; Mrs. W. C. Edmiston, vice president; Mrs. George Shively, secretary; and Mrs. George Hoffman, treasurer. The club, which was organized five years ago, has a membership of about 50.

Problems That Perplex Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Romantic Cowboy. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am sitting alone tonight in a camp on the P. and O. with your paper of advice before me. So I thought I would ask your opinion on a few things: I am a cowboy, I believe, by heart, the work comes to me so easy; but I am getting tired of this kind of a life and want a change. I do not go to very many amusements, I do not take well; I don't know why. At first the crowd treats me fine, but if I go again they will hardly speak to me. I went to a school party one time; they were dancing school dances, such as marching through the promised land. I did not know how it was done; the teacher showed me how. After that the crowd would not have anything to do with me. I dress well, never use slang in company, speak to everybody kindly; but still to no avail. I have never harmed a soul. I have always tried to follow the straight and narrow. My fellow men have nothing to shun me for, but still they do. I sometimes feel like I ought to be a hermit and leave them forever. I got acquainted with this same teacher afterwards and she seemed to like me pretty well for about three months; she then asked me to slip; but I think it was that some of my "friends" told her some lies about me that she believed. She now is in the east or west. I don't know which, but all summer long I have longed for this girl as if I had never known her. I would like to ask her what she heard about me that was not right and to talk with her again. I would not care who was made of me if I could have this girl for nine ome.

Now, Miss Fairfax, please answer this, that I might start again into this world with a happier heart, to know, and to know I know, which move to make. A LONELY COWBOY. Just what is it you want to know? How to find the girl? How to make people like you? I would be glad to help you, but not at all sure I can. Your letter makes me think you are too sensitive and too introspective—that is, you examine yourself too closely. You seem to be somewhat melancholy in your outlook. It is very evident you are longing for romance. It is also evident that you are relying upon your virtues to pull you through. Has it ever occurred to you that cheerfulness and optimism are quite as good virtues as "never using slang in company"? Every one of the virtues you mention is a decided credit to you, but I believe if you will stop thinking of yourself so seriously you will more quickly succeed in making someone else, perhaps this teacher, think seriously of you. The best thing you have told me about yourself is that you like your work, which I presume is in the out-of-doors. Remember this: A strong, clean, honest man is admired by all the world. Get some self-confidence, aggressiveness and joy into your makeup and you will never again have to sign yourself "A Lonely Cowboy."

H. and F.: Be steadfast to your principles and the "fellows" will take care of themselves. It isn't wrong not to have a bean, you know. Birthday Party. Mrs. H. G. Fleishman entertained in honor of her daughter Harriet's birthday, Tuesday evening. Twenty young people were the guests. Holiday decorations were used. Games and dancing occupied the evening. Club Issues Invitations. The University club has scheduled a steak dinner for its members on Thursday of this week.

My Marriage Problems Adelo Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

The Question Dicky Asked Madge to Answer. Bess Dean achieved a most creditable laugh at the end of Dicky's speech, and a fascinating point. I made a mental bow to her pluck and poise, for it took both to remain calm in the face of so humiliating a failure as was hers in her attempt to make me jealous of her. Whether or not Dicky had fathomed her scheme I did not know, but if he had carefully planned to thwart it and humiliate her he could not have gone about it in more effective fashion than he had just used. My heart was singing with cruel delight as I listened to Bess Dean's retort, elation that was augmented by the knowledge which I knew she also possessed, that both Mr. Cosgrove and Fred had heard every word of Dicky's speech before departing on their trip to the shore for the fish and tackle. "How well you tell it!" she laughed. "Madge, don't you believe a word he's saying! I would be no 'treat lady friend' to you if I didn't tell you that he's simply trying to square himself with you. I didn't mean to give him away, but since he's so ungalant I'm going to spill the beans. He was trying to hold my hand all the way, but I thought of you, dearie, and I repelled him. But he needs disciplining, and a stern eye kept on him." Madge Rejoices. "I'll discipline him," I promised, laughing, "when I get him home." "Yes, I'll bet she'll put salt on my broken head, just on account of you, Bess Dean," Dicky groaned in mock terror. "Say, I'll wait a hundred years to get even with you for stirring up Madge's awful jealousy like this!" Then we all laughed, and if there was a slightly hollow sound to our mirth there was no one but ourselves to hear it. As if by psychic unspoken consent we stopped the badinage and talked of the carefully impersonal things which are always such a refuge in a strained situation until Fred and his father came back with the fish and the poles. By the time we reached home we were all so physically weary that I do not think any mental emotion mattered to any of us. And then Dicky and I were in our own shack, and I gently pushed him into a big chair and brought a pillow for his head. "I didn't fuss when there were people around," I said determinedly, "but you may as well submit with a good grace now. I'm going to take care of that head if I have to tie you hand and foot to do it."

"All right," he growled, yet there was tenderness in his voice. "But if I fall asleep while you're fessing and you wake me up, the angels in their infinite mercy help you." "Pooh! who's afraid?" I mocked as I lighted my canned heat stove, put on my tiny teakettle of water and prepared basin and gauze and dressings. And, indeed, my heart was lighter than it had been since Bess Dean appeared at the boarding house. I never had been actually jealous of her, never really feared her, but she had made me most uncomfortable, and I rejoiced at her discomfiture, and at my own surprise that she would find some use to advance the date of her departure. While I waited for the water to boil and then cook again, Dicky told me of the information Kronish had given him. "Does Lillian know?" "Kronish didn't know Smith's plans, I am certain of that. But he was the 'Man Friday,' who did whatever he was told. Smith told him tonight to swear that he had been in the inn since before dinner, when in reality Kronish knew that he was gone for two hours before the trooper was brought in, and that when he did come back, secretly by a rear path, he was sweating, winded, as if he had been running, and his clothing was in a frightful state of dishevelment, as if he had been crawling on the ground, which, of course, we know he had. It seems he always kept a complete wardrobe at the inn, and a room to himself there, so he could change at any time. He's a bird, that chap! Wonder what's at the bottom of all this. Do you suppose Lillian knows?" "I haven't the slightest idea," I replied truthfully. "When she gave me the badge she told me she had a hunch I might need it, but she said that she was not speaking from any knowledge, just from intuition."

"Not from any specific knowledge of this case, perhaps," Dicky rejoined sagely, "but I'll bet she has some background somewhere against which this will show up. Trust old Lil for hunch! I might need it, but she said that she was not speaking from any knowledge, just from intuition." "I might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good. Four 1/2 ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup. And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air pipes, stops the annoying throat cough, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, cough, hoarseness and laryngeal asthma. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for healing the membranes. To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "212 ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

it for a change. Isn't that water right yet?" "Just," I pronounced upon investigation and proceeded with the washing and dressing of his head, finding that it was indeed but a slight wound, which required only the attention I could give it. Dicky squirmed and swore, raved at my awkwardness, threatened to put on the bandages himself—registering all the usual masculine stunts in such circumstances—but when the ordeal was finished he drew me down on his knee, kissed me warmly, then held me off, looking at me quizzically. "You little devil!" he said, "I meant to pay you back tonight for the way you've been throwing me so free and easy that you've given me your good dose of your own medicine. Let me wonder if I really had succumbed to the lady's charms. But you were such a trump down there that I just couldn't. Kiss me again." And I meekly and joyously obeyed.
