To Leave Omaha. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Coffey are planning to leave Omaha at the end of December to make their home in Hastings, Neb. Many farewell parties are being given in their honor in the next two weeks. Monday evening Miss Jane Canan entertained at dinner at the Athletic club for Mr. and Mrs. Coffey, and afterwards Clarence Canan entertained at bridge. Mrs. Richard J. Skankey was hostess Tuesday at a luncheon at the Burgess-Nash tea room, followed by an Orpheum party for Mrs. Coffey, and Friday Mrs. Lloyd True will give a bridge party in her honor.

For Mrs. de Dardel.

Mrs. E. V. Delaplaine will be hostess Wednesday at a luncheon at her home for Mrs. Carl O. de Dardel of Chicago, who, with Mr. de Dardel, the Swedish consul, is in Omaha for a few days. Her other guests will be the Messadams, the Rylanders, Otto Swanson, Hilding Jacobson Charles Keller, Clarke Russell, J. Henriksen, Fred Marthos of Chicago, N. P. Swanson and Miss Annelia Edquist.

Joint Church Bazaars.

Wednesday and Thursday, December 14 and 15, have been set aside as bazaar days at the court house for the following organizations: The Asbury Methodist Episcopal church, First Memorial Methodist Episcopal, Walnut Hill Methodist Episcopal, Clinton Hill Presbyterian, Emanuel Baptist and the Ladies of the G. A. R.

Observes Birthday Anniversary.

Mrs. Harriet MacMurphy, charter member of the Omaha Women's club, chairman of the constitution committee, was presented with flowers in honor of her birthday anniversary at the general meeting of the club Monday afternoon in Burgess-Nash auditorium. The home economics department also remembered the occasion with flowers.

Miss Bradley Takes New Position.

Miss Grace V. Bradley, who recently resigned as superintendent of Ford hospital, is the new superintendent of the Douglas county hospital, where the Nurses' home has been reorganized and improved. Miss Bradley has been president of the Nebraska State Nurses' association and was for a time secretary of the board of nurse examiners.

Artist Here for Holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Wilbur and their baby son arrived Tuesday morning from New York to spend the holidays with Mr. Wilbur's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilbur of this city. Lawrence Wilbur is a former Omahian, an illustrator, some of whose work was on exhibition this fall in the public library with the exhibit of Nebraska artists.

C. L. T. Club.

The C. L. T. club met at the home of Mrs. L. B. Messacar, 4319 Grand avenue, Monday afternoon. Miss Winnifred Paddock was hostess.

Miss Findley to Entertain.

Miss Mary Findley will be hostess at a tea January 2nd at her home in honor of Miss Dorothy Collier, who will be her guest during the holidays.

Dancing Party.

An old time dance will be given in the parish hall of Holy Angels church, Twenty-eighth and Fowler streets, Thursday evening, under the auspices of the women's society.

Soloist at Concert

Miss Marjorie Current, University of Omaha sophomore, will be the soloist in "The Christmas Dawn," a cantata, to be given as a feature of the Glee club concert in the university auditorium, Wednesday evening, 8 o'clock. Jean Bucta Protzman, head of the college department of music, will direct the chorus. Fifty-five college students will take part in the affair.

Members of the French alliance lunch together every Saturday noon in a special dining room of the Burgess-Nash stores at which French only is spoken, and after the lunch enjoy a short talk in French by Dr. Despecher and others. The members are also enjoying lessons in French which have been arranged by the alliance.

Mrs. E. M. Spear of Genoa, Neb., is in Omaha for a few days.

Announcement is made of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. A. Marks Wednesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Krane announce the birth of a daughter, Jane, December 13, at Stewart hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Selwyn Doherty of Tacoma, Wash., who have been visiting Mrs. Doherty's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Rahm, left Sunday evening for their home.

A son, Richard Leroy, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith at St. Luke's hospital December 8. Mrs. Smith was formerly Miss Genevieve Ingalsbe of Council Bluffs.

Mrs. George R. Voss and Mrs. Henry W. Yates left Tuesday for St. Joseph, Mo., where they will spend a few days with a sister of Mrs. Yates, Mrs. J. P. Johnson.

Will T. Graham and daughter, Miss Helen, leave Saturday for Chicago and Freeport, Ill., where they will visit Mr. Graham's mother. They will return Christmas eve.

Mrs. Fred Marthos of Chicago is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Henriksen, and will stay until Christmas day. She leaves Christmas evening for her home.

Miss Anita Currey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Currey, will return Sunday from Danville, Ky., where she is at school, to spend Christmas vacation with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cole will entertain at a buffet supper Sunday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Forgan of New York, who arrive this week to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Congdon.

Mrs. Frank Colpetzer, who is now in Chicago, will arrive in Omaha soon after Christmas to be with Mr. and Mrs. Moshier Colpetzer. The latter have given up their plan of going to Chicago before Christmas.

Philip Gray Lovell of Cambridge, Mass., whose engagement to Miss Helen Smith of Omaha was announced early last summer, will spend Christmas at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Smith.

Miss Lucille Goldstrom will leave Wednesday evening for Chicago, Louisville, Ky., and Charleston, W. Va., for a two months' visit with relatives and friends. Many social affairs have been planned in her honor.

George Voss will arrive home next week from Princeton, to spend the holidays with his mother, Mrs. George R. Voss. Mr. Voss, though connected with the Triangle club, will not travel with them this year. He is property man for the organization, and his work is completed before the club starts its trip.

"Cupid alone knows what a woman will do, and he won't tell," Dicky observed, talking to the dining-room door and bowing low as he ushered us in. As I pressed close after Lillian, I managed to give her an old signal which we had used when we were doing government work together during the war, and which meant that I must speak to her alone as soon as possible. It was not until we were all seated at the table that she was able to assure me by an answering signal that she had understood and would act upon my message.

"There was never a gayer breakfast table," Dicky said, "than the one I had with me when I was one of his most nonsensical moods, and I breathlessly aided him in keeping the conversation at the frivolous key to which he had pitched it. I think Lillian comprehended what I was trying to do, for she tossed our absurdities back to me admiringly, and Robert Savarin—while a close observer could see his submerged grudge—manfully tried to hide his annoyance.

"Will you motor with me this morning?" he asked Lillian. "I'd love to," Lillian rejoined cordially, but her eyes were on me, and I saw she was waiting for a cue to manage the prior interview I wished.

"Can you delay your trip just a few minutes, Robert?" I asked ingenuously. "Lillian has been promising for ages to draw me the outline of a fascinating little suit for Junior which she saw in the shops one day. And I do want to get started making it today. I have the material all ready, and I'll keep her only a little while!"

"Of course, as long as you wish," the artist responded courteously, and I relaxed with the assurance that I would be able to warn Lillian of Robert's reaction toward her work, before he saw her.

She came to the point at once, as after breakfast, I strolled with her to her bureau, leaving Junior and Marion with Dicky and Robert.

"What's up, Madge?" she asked. "Any more news of last night while I've been gone?"

"No, but it's something almost as startling," I returned, "and you, I have no business requiring it to you, but I feel somehow that I must."

Then I told her.

French Alliance

Dr. Felix Despecher will give a lecture before the members of the French alliance in his office Saturday evening, December 17, at 8 o'clock. The subject of this lecture will be Mt. St. Michel and surrounding country, illustrated with lantern slides from views which the doctor took while in France last summer. This will be the first of a series of lectures which the doctor will give this winter. The other subjects will be: "A Trip Through Alsace Lorraine," "A Visit to Auvergne," "The Coast Country From Brest to St. Nazaire."

The doctor has many views illustrating the country, and the customs of the people, other lectures will be given this winter by Madame August Borglum and the official lecturers from France, among whom will be Bernard Fay, Arnold Van Gannep and Frank Schoell, details of which will be announced later. Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

The Test of Love. Dear Miss Fairfax: A girl of 27 became engaged to a young man of about a year ago. The young man was called to service in a foreign country and under the circumstances they agreed to break the engagement, although he claimed he loved her and was willing to marry her and take her with him. Through a change in plans for which he was not responsible he was not called to go after all. Now, though he meets the girl in a business way several times a week, he has never referred to their former relationship or treated her other than as an old friend. The girl is heart-broken and it is hard for her to meet him in that way.

How would you advise the girl to act or what would you advise her to do? Possibly the man feels that the girl failed him and her promise of love when she did not try to arrange to marry him and accompany him on his projected trip across the sea. Men have their pride, too, you know. If the girl's love is greater than her self love, she might suggest to the man that she'd like to see him at her home and have a chance to resume the old friendship. After all, suppose she is slighted—won't the quick, sure wound be better than wondering and torturing herself with the possibilities of the situation? An invitation to call is encouragement—but it can't be called "running after a man."

Let Them Gossip. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am 18 and have a boy friend of about one and a half years and whom I have known two years. Lately he has been taking me out almost every Sunday. A girl friend tells me people are talking about us. My feelings toward this boy are those of strong friendship and love (if that's what it may be called), the kind you would give to a brother. Am I doing wrong in going out with this young man, and shall I believe my friend about the people talking about us?

Suppose folks did talk a bit. What could they say? "Bertha's a sweet girl. Charlie Davis seems to find her interesting. Those two young folks certainly have a fine friendship." There's no harm in seeing this boy once a week and you'd be weak and foolish to give another thought to a careless girl's foolish and exaggerated report of a bit of gossip which probably never meant anything at all to the folks who like to talk over their neighbors.

A Test of Love. Dear Miss Fairfax: A very dear friend, 21, is going about with a young man four years her senior. This man loves this girl very much and she loves him. This girl has been used to good times, but this man does not make enough to give them to her. She is willing to sacrifice all this for the man she loves. He wants to marry her, but is afraid that she would not be happy, while she says she can. Now, what I want to know is, do you think that this girl should waste her time with this man when he doesn't think he can trust her? INTERESTED.

Don't you think it is just as well for the girl to prove to her own satisfaction that she's likely to be contented and happy with what the man has to give? It's easy enough to make all sorts of promises in the first flush of emotion. But when it comes to settling down the quiet might seem humdrum. For her own sake as well as the man's it's best to be practical and make a test of character and inclinations. Instead of resenting the man's attitude, why not share his sane recognition of the fact that it's easier to promise than to perform.

Don't Write to Him. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am 20. There is a young man who works in the neighborhood and in whom I am much interested. Now I should like to meet him, but unfortunately none of my friends are acquainted with him. I was thinking about writing a friendly note to him, but do not like to without consulting you. Won't you please advise me? Could you suggest anything else? I. W.

Don't write the young man. He will probably think you forward and "easy" and will find some way to humiliate you. If you wait the introduction may come about in a way to save you from cheapening yourself.

Flying Squadron. The flying squadron of war days is back in the harness. Mrs. W. E. Bolin, chairman of supplies, organized it on Monday and her workers will cover every public gathering in Omaha this week in the interests of the fifth annual Red Cross roll call.

Monday afternoon the squadron visited the Army building at Fifteenth and Dodge streets. They reported 100 per cent membership for the drive.

The squadron will work every day this week and it will follow conventions and all public meetings of the city. It is composed of Mrs. Bolin, chairman, and Mesdames Harry Fitchery, Harry Pierce, Beatrice Greenfield and Misses Nan Casar and Gertrude McCumber.

Mrs. Morton Vieno, chairman of the movie houses for the drive, has organized a band of workers who will cover all the performances at the movies during the week. Mrs. H. M. Craig is in charge of the Strand theater; Muse, Mrs. L. C. Banner; Rialto, Mrs. Olive Plaggett; Empress, Mrs. S. G. Othmer; and Sun, Mrs. Jennie Callias.

Red Cross campaign headquarters moved Monday morning to its new location at 1829 Douglas street.

Italy this year just about doubled last year's production of a little more than 110,000 tons of sugar.

My Marriage Problems. Adelle Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

How Lillian Came Back From Her Marion's eyes widened with interest as she saw her mother descend from Colonel Travers' automobile and watched the stately politeness of the officer in taking leave of her. That he had meant to escort her to the house, I guessed, and I smiled to myself at Lillian's frustrated purpose by giving him her hand in farewell. He bent over it ceremoniously, and Marion gasped ecstatically. "Oh Auntie Madge, Uncle Robert!" she exclaimed. "Isn't it just like a movie! Only he ought to have kissed her hand. I don't see why he didn't. Oh-h, Uncle Robert, don't! You squeezed me so tight you hurt." "I'm sorry, dear." The man loosened the arm which he had involuntarily tightened around the child at the sight of her headless unconscious words and Marion, wriggling down, ran to meet her mother. Robert Savarin rose as Lillian came toward the steps, and I adroitly slipped in front of him, determined to keep the management of the situation in my own hands. "Do hurry, Lillian," I entreated laughingly. "Here's a starving man who has waited breakfast so that you and I may have a second cup of coffee with him. "He'd better look out, or I may devour the whole breakfast," she retorted lightly, coming up the steps. "There's nothing like a motor ride in this air to give you a second appetite. Robert, you were a dear to wait. Thank you," as he took her motor coat from her. "Now for the breakfast room!" Dicky Helps. Nothing could have been more casual, more matter-of-fact than her manner, and yet I saw that Marion's ridiculous little speech concerning the movies had roused again the absurd jealousy concealed behind Robert Savarin's calmness. "Would he be able to control it, or would he?" With a heart-felt little sigh of relief, I saw Dicky rounding the corner of the house, and knew that if he were only in the mood to set going his never-failing stock of nonsense, there would be no chance for Robert Savarin to betray his jealousy or to brood over it. "Morning, everybody!" Dicky called. "Madge, ma? I inquire why you did not waken me when you rose to be Queen of the May this morning. If I hadn't had the subconscious thought of those fish Mrs. Cosgrove promised to fry for breakfast, I would have been sleeping yet,
