

CHAPTER NIN. Strange Quarters.

The peddler that took Miss Kitty Cat away in his cart drove long into the night. Inside the basket into which her captor had popped her. Miss Kitty kept her wits at work. She knew that there were many twists and turns as they creaked up the hills and rattled down the other ide of them. Then there were level stretches where the peddler held his horse to a swinging gait that fast put long miles between them and

It was no wonder that Miss Kitty Cas was andry.

Farmer Green's place in Pleasant "Dear mel" Miss Kitty thought. "What a tramp- I'll have getting back home again!" For already she was planning to return to the farm. She didn't care if they did need a good mouser at the stranger's house. They needed one just as much at traps to take care of the mice she'll soon he eaten out of house and home," Miss Kitty mused. "The minute that fat Moses Mouse knows I'm gone he'll be as bold as brass." At last the wagon left the hard road and pulled up in a dooryard. A dog barked. And Miss Kitty heard voices.

"I've brought you something in here that you'll like," said the peddler as he handed Miss Kitty's basket to somebody. "But don't look at it out of doors or it'll get away."

Later, isside the house, a woman let Miss Kitty, out of .her. prison.

"What a hig cat!" she exclaimed.

"What a big cat!" she exclaimed. "Oh, I picked her up on the road," said the peddler. "She looked as if she wanted a ride," chuckled. "I think she was hu "She'll find hunting enough here," said his wife. "This house is overrun with mice. I'll just put her down cellar and let her work for her supper." Then she gave Miss Kitty

Arrange them in a simple way on a band of plain material, of a pleasing color. Stitch this band to the shade, it on with colored thread or worsted, a fancy stitch or with invisible stitches. A tassel that matches the color of the band finishes your decorated window shade. Another pretty way to decorate a shade is to cut the flowers or ornaments out of wall, paper. Glue them to the shade and then shellac them with clear shellac. FLORA. (Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Co)

Problems That Perplex Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

In Love With Himself. Dear Miss Fairfax: My brother nd his girl friend have parted, although they love each other, for the following reason: The last time that they were out together, they went hour. When the girl's father gave hour, understand that he could not keep her out that late he considered its an insult and now refuses to go to the house, but offered to meet her clandestinely. This she will not do.

Is he justified in not calling? she right in not meeting him out?
"THEIR FRIEND." The girl's father did not insult your brother when he remonstrated with him about keeping his daughter out too late. But he is insulting her when he suggests that she met him clandestinely. He seems more in love with himself and his pride than with his sweetheart. The Bight Spirit. Dear Miss Pairfax: I love a girl dearly, but whenever I ask her to as out with me she objects. She says that she likes me as a friend cand I know that she thinks of me a great deal, but only as a friend), but she will not go out to spend a day with me.

I go to her home often. She confides in me but still she refuses to fides in me, but still she refuses to The girl seems to have fine feelings. She doesn't want you to spend your money on her. Her friendship doesn't appear to be based on a mercenary spirit of seeing what she can get from you. Her friendship is worth cultivating and if you show enough loyalty and understanding you may win a deeper regard.

That woman might have set out a little milk for me. It would have But Miss Kitty was too hungry to tasted good, after my long ride is sit long at the foot of the cellar sack and slept for a while. And just that stuffy basket." Miss Kitty could stairs in thought. She soon heard before the roosters began to crow
