

Budget Increase Is Reported for Episcopal Church

National Field Secretary Says Salaries of Clergymen Larger and Administration Businesslike.

A $7,000,000 increase in the national Episcopal budget last year was reported by Rev. E. T. Kemmerer of St. Louis, national field secretary, at the Nebraska diocese council meeting in session at Trinity cathedral yesterday.

A nationwide campaign and re-organization of church administration on a more businesslike basis brought better results in financial values as well as financial, he stated.

Salaries Are Larger. Salaries of clergymen were uniformly increased and many missions became self-supporting and were raised to the rank of parishes. One of the churches which applied for recognition was St. Mark's, South Side, of which Rev. C. E. Brown is pastor.

Diocesan reports occupied most of the afternoon session. Election of officers and delegates to the general conference will take place this morning.

A Letter to a Country Cousin

In Answer to a Request for Information Requiring the Latest Things in Home Furnishings.

Omaha, Nebraska,
January 13th, 1922.

My dear Janet:

In response to your request that I look up some furnishings for your new home I made a tour of the stores today and so enthused am I over what I saw that I am hastening to write you at once.

I am so glad that you asked me to do this for you, for otherwise I am sure I would never have realized the wealth of beautiful things our Omaha stores contain. I say stores but I think I better change it to store, for most of my time was spent in the beautiful new furniture department of the Brandeis Store, which occupies the entire seventh floor of that immense establishment.

This department was only opened late in the fall and this was really the first opportunity I have had to see it, although I have wanted to for a long time, for their clever advertising slogan, "To be downtown and not visit the Brandeis Store's new Furniture Department is not to be downtown at all," has positively been haunting me.

You did not state exactly what you wanted but suggested that I look around and give you the latest ideas in house furnishings and tell you what I think will please you; so here is my furniture story, my dear, and a long one it is, for I saw so many lovely things.

Let's begin with the living room. Such luxurious davenport and chairs as I did see, and when the accom- modating salesman suggested that I try one and I sank down into its soft depths, my shopping tour came near ending right there. I am going to have one of those chairs for my own just as soon as I can afford it. Some of those sets are of tapestry and others of velour, both plain and figured, but quite the loveliest is a davenport and chairs of squirrel brown brocaded mohair. Doesn't the word "mohair" bring back to mind the sleek hair cloth furniture of our grandmother's time? The fabric of today, however, is the last word in an upholstery material for beauty and dura- bility. This set with a mahogany bookcase, spinet desk, table and some odd chairs from Brandeis' vast stock, would make your large living room very beau- tiful.

Now for the dining room. I saw so many beau- tiful sets that I can scarcely decide which to tell you about. I believe, though, the one I like best is the one in the model dining room. Oh! I forgot to tell you they have six model rooms all furnished with draperies and everything complete. To see these would give you many splendid furnishing ideas. Well, this is an Italian Renaissance set of beautiful walnut, upholstered in taupe mohair with a background of gold, with such a wonderful buffet, closed china cabinet and exten- sion table. Can't you just picture this in your new home?

Another beautiful set is of Italian walnut, inset with ebony and upholstered in figured tapestry, and then there are a number of mahogany sets, and I was much impressed by the number of splendid less ex- pensive sets in other woods.

Oh! I do so want you to have a dandy breakfast room set of ivory, decorated with bands of blue and sprays of dainty flowers, but if this does not suit your color scheme there are many others just as at- tractive.

For your sun room I came near purchasing on the spot, without your orders, a lovely set of wicker furni- ture in brilliant orange and black, which had just come in, for I know it will not be there many days. The chairs are upholstered in gay figured crotone and have spring cushions—an unusual feature in this type of furniture. Another that I liked is in gray and lavender.

The Brandeis stock of bedroom furniture is cer- tainly large and varied and one can carry out almost any color scheme or idea in furnishing. There are lovely suites of mahogany, ivory, French gray, oak, walnut and novelty woods. One that would be beau- tiful for your room is of walnut, very artistic in design, hand carved, with a beautiful dresser, dressing table and chiffoniere.

Another, which would be beautiful in the guest room, is of Italian walnut, in the new polychrome finish, which gives a hint of many colors as the light strikes it. The chairs of this suite are upholstered in rose tapestry.

Of course you will want a day bed in one of your rooms and you will certainly have no difficulty in making a choice from the many shown.

I also saw beautiful grandfather clocks with chimes; also chairs and tables of every size and style, tea wagons, sewing tables and many odd pieces of fur- niture, which you will want.

Really this wonderful display seemed almost like a furniture exposition and the amazing and best part of it is that the prices are most reasonable. A little money will certainly go a long way here.

I also visited the carpet and drapery department and was amazed at the display of beautiful rugs and curtains—in fact at every turn I met with some new surprise and left with the realization that the Bran- deis Store is a wonderful establishment which every Omahan should be proud of.

You certainly would not recognize it, for since your visit here two years ago they have taken over the whole building, added additional stories, remodeled many floors and made many changes. Now it is a store occupying a building of ten stories, a block in length—in fact longer, for you may recall the in- teresting underground arcades which so often puzzle strangers.

When you come to Omaha to purchase your furniture we will have luncheon and afternoon tea in the beautiful Brandeis restaurant on the tenth floor, which is one of the finest restaurants in the United States. You will enjoy this for they have a splendid orchestra there.

Hoping that you will come very soon so that you can also take advantage of the many January bargains they have in all departments, I am,

Always cordially yours,
LUCILLE
