Problems That Perplex Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Domineering at 19. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a boy of 19 years and rather tall, brown hair and eyes, and am going with girls. I have been going with her one year. She is a good girl and I think a whole lot of her; but when I tell her I am going to the dance or shows with some other girl, she is very jealous and she will say that I am going with this girl or that one. What do you think of a girl like that?

Whenever he felt one, he kicked. A row of currant bushes grew behind the barn. And one day when Johnnie stripped off a few stems of the red fruit and stood in the back door of the barn, eating it, he happened to snap a current at Twinkheels. The result both pleased and surprised him. When the current struck Twinkheels he laid back his ears, dropped his head, and lay flat with his back to the barn.

When we have a quarrel she goes to her mother for some advice. But I think a girl of 18 should use her own advice in a thing like this. I have been going to quit her or three times just over her mother's advice, but when it comes that her mother will say she means anything by what she says.

It is probably jealousy which causes your girl to think you are going to the dances or shows with some other girl. Jealousy is an ugly emotion and should not be encouraged, but everyone has some of it in his nature, and the fact that a girl exhibits some of it does not surprise me and should not surprise you. You owe it to this girl to protect her feelings all you can and make no play upon her jealousy.

Your second notion against her is very much in her favor. I like to hear of girls who consult their mothers. I do think you should advise her to work out her own problems and should not run to mother with all her petty grievances, but a girl of 18 does very well to advise with her parents.

I don't altogether like the tone of your letter. You seem to have ideas that you are doing this girl a favor by going with her. Friendships should be 50-50 propositions. The girl may be inclined to advise by going with you. Had you thought of that? And why do you not take her to the dances or shows you mention if you think a lot of her?

You ask me what I would do in your place. I would quit going with a girl entirely if she shows signs of jealousy. If I couldn't be kind and tender and good to her, I would move on and give someone else a chance. Your letter has told me nothing against her and much for her. It shows she is inclined to be unobedient and when the girl suffers from it you blame her for a little show of feeling. I judge she cares for you.

D. D. S.: The sentiment of your letter is good, but I am choosing not to publish it.

Jack: You should have eight hours' sleep each night. I can't tell you what time you should retire without knowing what time you get up in the morning.

Sally: I would not advise a girl of your age to defy her mother's judgment, and I certainly wouldn't advise her to go to practice deception of any kind.

Silly Song

A CUCKOO BIRD. Last Tuesday morn as I lay 'neath the quilt, a waikin' for my wife to get the fire built, she came into the bedroom lookin' mad enough to fight and said, "Say, Kook, the washin's gone that left out last night." Some thief has took the whole darned works and even stole the line. You dress and crank the fliver up and go and hunt the swine." I jumped up to my pants and shirt and grabbed my rusty gun and looked around the place to see what else the thief had done. My rubber coat and boots were gone and all our homemade soap, the curtains from the fliver and the washin's halter rope. The cellar door was open and I thought of my home-brew. I cocked my rusty weapon and down the stairs I flew. And there, beside my rusty gun and my Basset's Billy goat. The film of death was on his eye, the rattle in his throat. Bill Basset said he never hoped to see, prepared by man, a poison rank enough to kill a dog.

My Marriage Problems

Adele Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

The Problem Jim Presented to Madge.

"Mrs. Graham, may I speak to you a minute?" Jim, framed in the door leading from the farm kitchen to the dining room, was a pathetic figure. His beard was of two or three days' growth, something unusual with Jim, and his usually ruddy cheeks showed an unhealthy pallor. He was many pounds thinner than when I left the farm, and his eyes appeared to have retreated into his head.

"Of course, Jim," I rose from the table where I had been sitting waiting for the minutes to pass until the time agreed upon by Lillian and me for our excursion to Katie. Dicky and his sister, Mrs. Harrison, had long since departed for the shopping trip to Southampton and the visit to the Bridgehampton beach in order to see the ocean by moonlight. Mrs. Ticer, after helping Katie with the supper, had had some home. "She's only a girl, and awful innocent, like a little kid in lots of ways, Katie is, and I didn't want her to get her name up. So I've kept her in, and I know you'll take care of her when I've gone away, and not let her get into any trouble. If after a while you think the fellow's all right, I won't put anything in her way. She can get a divorce and marry who she likes, and I'll be glad to see her."

"Careful," I said, "Katie's just as much in love with you now as she ever was, and that's a good deal. And I'm sure that soon she can explain why she met that man, and why everything will be all right."

"That's what Mrs. Underwood said—that after a while, Katie would explain a lot of things to me, and she said you and her was going with Katie tonight. But that don't make any difference about my going. Mrs. Graham, Katie hates me now for treating her so rough. She hasn't spoken to me since and I know it's on account of that other man. No, she likes him best, and I'm better out of the way."

An Army Marches On Its Stomach, Said Napoleon

The Great Corsican Knew That Success in Life Depends Upon Your Strength, Energy and Endurance.

By HARRISON VAUGHN. When Napoleon led his victorious armies through Europe, his worst enemies were not the nations defending themselves against his smashing onslaught; but he was confronted by the graver question of how to provide nourishing and strengthening food for his soldiers.

The Great Corsican realized long over a century ago, as has every commanding general since, that men's bodies must be perfectly nourished if they are to retain their natural strength, energy and vigor; in fact, that the very health of the human being is regulated almost entirely by the stomach.

Under-feeding, insufficient nourishment, means loss of flesh, anemia, lack of red blood and subsequent weakness of the entire system.

What such people need to enable nature to bring back their strength and vigor, restore their lost weight, and put them in fighting trim, with rich red blood coursing through their veins is Tanlac, the powerful reconstructive tonic and body builder.

A man or woman suffering from sour stomach, bad breath, biliousness, indigestion, or gas on stomach, is unfitted either for physical or mental labor. Sufferers from these ailments find life a burden; they look on the world through blue glasses, the joy and rewards of the vigorous, happy, normally healthy person is not theirs. Their troubles smother them against the world, destroy their ambitions and make their lives dull and unhappy.
