INIATURE telegraph poles with wires strung the length of the ta-bles and telegram place cards formed the decorations at the Buelness and Professional Woman's league luncheon Wednesday at the Brandeis restaurant. Usherettes in western union uniforms seated the guests and paged members of the league with telegrams.

One from Heaven, signed Hatty Green, delivered to Miss Elizabeth McGrady was as follows: "Impossible to mail my check for the $3,000,-000 which I have been owing you for some time but I am hoping that I shall be able to pay you this overdue account sometime in the near future. I paid a frightful price for my last harp and there has been no noticeable reduction in the price of wings, but I do promise to telegraph this amount to you as soon as possible." Miss Grace Rowland was notified by William Jennings Bryan of her appointment as United States representative from Nebraska to the congress of 1944. The president of the psychological re-search committee informed Dr. Amelia Brandt of a meeting to be held in Plymouth, Mass., relative to health conditions of hens in all countries and earnestly requested her presence. Miss Imogene McCaig received an interesting cable from Poland offering her full charge of the women's division of the National Advertising Bureau for the apprehension of criminals—salary, 30,000 rubles the first year.

The western union group had charge of the affair, with Miss L. M. Montgomery, presiding. Mrs. Paul Rigdon spoke on "newspaper advertising." Covers were placed for 60.

Printed Chiffon Goes Into Many Editions

By CORRINE LOWE.

New York .- (Special Correspondence.)-Chiffon is one popular work that never goes out of print. Just now printed chiffons are particularly good and are found in many of the loveliest of afternoon frocks destined for southern wear. Usually they are combined with some other fabric and the combinations of printed chiffon and foulard provide some of our most interesting novelties.

Here we show a charming after-noon frock of red, white and black printed chiffon, diversified with black velvet panels edged by white fox. To match this comes the charming wrap of black velvet lined with the dress material. An interesting new movement is provided here by the front, forming as it does the yoke eqffect featured nowadays in every kind of garment-capes, blouses, frocks, coats and the suit coats, over that of the girl.—C. A. W.

I've an idea that if you really loved the girl, you'd find a way to stand by your family and still have your happiness with the woman you want as your wife. Can't your sister work and contribute toward the support of herself and your mother? Can't you see a future ahead that will make it possible for you to marry and still stand by your obligations to those who need you? Of course if the girl won't wait, and if she has no regard for those who are dependent on you, she isn't worthy. But there is such a thing as being too willing to let obstacles stand in your way. your way.

The Question Direct.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have a particular friend whom I like better than anyone else and I strive to be mice and helpful to her. She gives me the impression that she likes me very much, but I have learned that she has a very large number of friends, whom she also likes. I am puzzled to know how I stand. She evades all direct questions. Can you advise a most unsettled lover?

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a man of 30. I have known a young lady for five years. Free evenings would give you more of a chance to go about. Learning to dance would be a good thing, for nearly all young people do, nowadays. If you call me some day or send me your address I will be glad to recommend a teacher. I am glad you can see that your mother was right. When I got home, 'bout 10 that night, the sight that met my eyes, before I got my mittens off, sure took me by surprise. Beneath a load of gilt-edged books the kitchen table groaned. My wife had put a mortgage on most every thing we owned. A pesky agent had been there and wished upon my wife, a forty-eleven volume set of Woodrow Wilson's Life. Now I must sell the spotted calf and haul off all the corn and pay $6 every week till Gabriel blows his horn. When I get Woodrow paid for, I'll bet I never go and leave my wife at home again to save her hard-earned dough.

Parents' Problems

What course should be followed with a little girl of 7 whose feelings are "easily hurt"—often when no such thing was intended?
Such a child thinks too much about herself, and the problem is to make her less self-conscious. Encourage a feeling of her responsibility for the happiness of others, in giving them cordial greeting, acknowledging their deeds of kindness or courtesy, setting them at ease in their play and believing absolutely in their general good will. A child who comes in contact freely with other healthy-minded children is likely to outgrow over-sensitiveness which is one of the most puerile, cramping qualities a grown man or woman

Why Are Some Women Popular, beloved and successful, while others drag out a negative existence, of no use to themselves or anyone else?
