Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

He Likes Sunflowers. Dear Miss Fairfax: As you have given good advice to others, I am asking your advice on several questions that have been in my mind for the past week or so.

1. What does a fellow mean when he says (if you say you don't like a thing), well, anyway, I like sunflowers and dandelions?

2. Last summer several girls and myself put our names in a bottle and threw it in the river. Shortly after that I received a letter from a boy that found our names. We have kept up a correspondence since then. He wrote and told me that he would in town next month. I want to know if it would be all right to have a date with him when he arrives.

3. Why is it that a boy always insists that a girl sit on his lap when in a car?

Please publish these questions and the answer in the paper, as it is the only way I will get to see the answers. Very truly yours, ANXIOUS.

1. The remark about sunflowers and dandelions is a mere flippancy, possibly intimating that it is a little difficult to suit you.

2. The bottle episode would not be sanctioned as good taste in the first place. If your correspondence with the young man has indicated him to be honest, upright and worthy it might be all right for you to see him. Owing to the irregular method of making his acquaintance, I would advise you to take particular pains to put yourself in the right light. Have him come to your home and meet your parents. Tell your parents how the friendship began and let him know that they understand. If you and the young man are really nice young people there is no reason why the friendship may not be a pleasant one.

3. I don't know they always did. I don't believe they ever, because it puts them in a position of proving themselves.

Marble and Dorothy: I think you are tripping with me. I do not believe girls could do the things you say and still keep the respect of their boy friends.

Fashion: Flame and bonfire are the new reds. Canary and Mimosa attractive yellows. The burnt orange and copper tones of the wild tiger lily and the canna are cleverly depicted. Long Beach and seaside are the latest sand shades.

I Need You: When in doubt, don't worry. If you truly loved and were willing to make any sacrifice, you would know it.

Fashion Dictates Black and White

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER.

Colorless, fickle fashion, changes her mood within the month this city's spring season will present to the world a tantalizing personality in contrasts of black and white with more than occasional splashes of flame colors like first rays of the sun on shadow and white barred dawn.

Gowns, hats, slippers, even coats, which have sprung into visibility in shops and salons here within the past few days are black and white. Or at least seven-tenths of them are.

Two-tenths run through the varying shades of red all the way from deep pini to "bouffie," each shade being of equal desirability with each other shade, if only it be vivid enough.

The remaining tenth portion of all displays is devoted to caring for the tastes of those strange creatures who insist upon blue or brown or perhaps green for their wardrobes. One may venture to add that this tenth is dragged forth and exhibited only under duress.

To the mind of style creators here it is negligible as last year's bargain sales.

My Marriage Problems

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

What Mother Graham Did When She Heard About Katie. I put down Katie's pitiful letter of farewell and looked at Lillian blankly. There is no other catastrophe save tragedy or sickness in one's immediate family to be compared, in a woman's mind, with the sudden elimination from her daily horizon of a faithful maid.

"So it appears," Lillian replied absently, and I saw that her brain was already busy with whatever complications Katie's unceremonious departure might bring to the mysterious problem she was facing.

With a sudden flash of hope I looked at my wrist watch. "We can get that train if we hurry!" I exclaimed. "Katie, of course, didn't expect that we'd be up so early, or she wouldn't have named the train. But we can catch her."

I started for the door, but Lillian's restraining hand was on my arm before I had reached it. "Sorry, dear girl," she said regretfully, "but I must ask you to let her go, and catch with me instead to get hold of Dr. Pettit. You do not know, and I cannot now tell you, just why that man in the hospital must be watched until I can make suitable arrangements for his guarding. Katie is worth nothing to me now as far as her own life is concerned, for her lips are sealed by that oath she took."

Mother Graham appears. "And if you'll stop to think a minute," Lillian went on sweetly, "she will be worth nothing—minus a considerable quantity—to you, until she gets over this brain-storm about her. Just imagine what you would be up against with Katie, morbid, weepy and tempery, lined up against your mother-in-law's moods. Nay, now, child! Subsidize the gifted Mrs. Ticer, if you have to pay her double for the heavy work, and you and I will pitch in to help her out for a little spell. We'll make everybody help, including Dicky, and picnic for awhile."

As she talked we had tacitly walked away from Katie's room. Lillian closing the door after us. Arriving in the kitchen, we were back in the spotless kitchen, which seemed to my disappointed eyes a dreary enough place without the accustomed cheery presence of my temperamental but faithful little maid.

"Why she hasn't been here long before this is a mystery to me. She must be unusually tired, for she always comes down to the kitchen a full hour before breakfast time, and she is usually in the kitchen, I said slyly, 'especially with my mother in the offing.'"

"It promises to be interesting," she smiled. "No," with decision, as I reached for the coffee percolator, "we haven't time now. We'll have to wait for our coffee until we get back. Do you suppose your mother-in-law will sleep until we return?"

"You little know her," I retorted. "Why she hasn't been here long before this is a mystery to me. She must be unusually tired, for she always comes down to the kitchen a full hour before breakfast time, and she is usually in the kitchen, I said slyly, 'especially with my mother in the offing.'"

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found this a most effective remedy of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap, but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any drugstore, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either will be equally good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs, soothing and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic cough, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes. Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. A Silly Song

By A. CUCKOO BIRD.

Jim Dodge's oldest boy was dumb, so all the neighbors said. He couldn't get arithmetic or spelling through his head. He always got the booby prize, examination day. His teacher said the only thing he liked to do was play. So Jim allowed that it was no use in wastin' time in sendin' him to school.

Jim thought so, but he was handy there. He kept all Jim's machinery and tools in good repair. He dammed the creek down by the barn and forced the stream to flow into a dingus he had made and caused a wheel to go. He ran the grindstone with the power, and got a circle saw, and cut up all the wood, and kindling, for his paw. Then one day he packed his grip and climbed onto a train and nearly seven months had gone when he came back again.

Some letters in the city have bought his fool machine, a water turbine it is called, for half a million, clean. We used to call him "Dodge's Fool," but when he passes now, we say, "there goes Inventor Dodge," and tip our hats and bow.
