

State Officials Exchange Views on Pure Food Laws

Physical Examination of All Persons Handling Foodstuffs Advocated in Convention Here.

Necessary legislation providing for the physical examination of all persons handling foodstuffs, extermination of rats and flies and strict enforcement of pure food regulations were important topics discussed at the convention of dairy, food, drug and feed officials of the north central states which opened at Hotel Rome yesterday.

Safe handling of food supplies has been improved in the past years, yet there is much room for further improvement, according to a paper on "Necessity for Strick Enforcement of the Sanitary Food Laws," by E. L. Redfern, chief chemist dairy and food commission of Iowa.

The old system permitted open displays of foodstuffs, which allowed accumulation of filth and germs. Present laws require foodstuffs to be displayed in covered cases. Eternal vigilance must be exercised in the extermination of rats, house flies and handlers of food suffering with communicable diseases.

Physical Examination Important. In the discussion following the paper Dr. S. J. Crumrine, secretary of the Kansas state board of health, declared the most important preventive measure that could be encouraged was the physical examination of every person handling food.

Every soft drink parlor that has no means of sterilizing glasses and dishes should be forced to install paper service," he said. "Persons contaminated with disease should be withheld from handling food. We have found that the fly and rat spread many diseases. All should be eradicated."

Mutual co-operation between national, state and city food inspectors would bring about better sanitary conditions, according to W. S. Frisbie, chemist of the bureau of chemistry, Washington, D. C.

State and city inspectors should file reports with the federal department and there should be a continual exchange of information. When violations are found they should be reported. State and city officials have just as much authority as national inspectors and they should all work in harmony. More thorough training of inspectors would heighten the efficiency of food inspection," he said.

Butter Industry Encouraged. Enforcement of the butter industry in Iowa, from producer to consumer, was described by W. A. Wentworth, secretary of the Iowa Creamery Secretaries' association.

Mr. Wentworth declared the butter and cream industry of inestimable value to any state, and argued it should be encouraged. He told of valuable co-operation received from the state food inspectors and how sanitary conditions were watched carefully.

Dr. S. J. Crumrine, secretary of the state board of health, Topeka, Kan., in a paper on "Qualifications of a Successful Inspector," said one of the most necessary qualifications, aside from professional knowledge, was politeness. He said inspectors should never be too officious or overbearing, and urged loyalty to employers and constant study to improve knowledge of the pure food field.

Julius Hortvet, chief chemist of the Minnesota dairy and food commission, read an informative paper on ice cream standards. Uses of gelatine and powders were mentioned, and practically demonstrated by Jacob Moyer, chemist of the Agricultural college at Ames, Ia.

Mayor Dahlman welcomed the pure food officials to the city in an address of welcome to which Leo Stuber, secretary of the Nebraska department of agriculture, replied.

Students' Scrimmage Regarded as "Prank"

School executives viewed the downtown scrimmage between students of Central and Technical High schools after the game Tuesday night as a mere prank, and did not look upon the situation as serious.

Chester G. Linn, dean of boys at Technical High, said when interviewed, that no student of the school had been found guilty of committing anything more serious than pranks.

"We have a good record for sportsmanship in Central," said E. E. McMillan, Central High dean, "it is customary for winners to hold a snake dance after a victory. The two schools ran into one another Tuesday and that is all there is to it."

The situation will be presented to Principals Masterson, Porter and Superintendent Beveridge when they return from Chicago.

Wants Suit Tried Before Removal

Man Facing Charge at Chicago Claims to Have Been Swindled Here.

Paul Apperson, Neville hotel, former proprietor of a music store near the Gayety theater and another at 1261 South Thirteenth street, arrested by Omaha police as a fugitive from justice for Chicago authorities, refused yesterday to return to the Windy city until after the date of a civil hearing scheduled in district court at Blair for March 6, without requisition papers.

"After that I will voluntarily return," he told Chief Van Deusen.

The civil suit pending in Blair is the result of Apperson having received 40 acres of Washington county land on a deal for his music store. The land was covered by fraudulent mortgages on property that is now owned by the Missour river, Apperson claims.

The charge against him in Chicago was trumped up when 60 boxes of stolen cigars were found in his apartment, he claims.

He was indicted and released on $5,000 bond. He came to Omaha a year ago, he said, and had since returned to Chicago several times.
