

Last Year Misses Turned "Mrs." Appear in Junior League Frolic This Year

Three of Omaha's prettiest misses in last Junior League show have changed their names within the year, and all three appear on the program of this year's frolic as "Mrs."

Mrs. Henry Bohling, as Melora Davis, was a sensation for her beauty in the prologue of last year's revue, and as a modern girl will take part in this year's performance at the Brandeis, May 12 and 13. Mrs. Bohling's engagement was announced the night of the revue, which least added interest to her act, and to her handsome fiance, who occupied a front box. Mr. and Mrs. Bohling, who were married late last autumn, made their home in St. Louis for a few months, but have now returned to Omaha permanently to the delight of their friends.

In the front box opposite Mr. Bohling last year sat Malcolm Baldrige, whose engagement to Miss Regina Connell had recently been announced. Miss Connell, now Mrs. Malcolm Baldrige, made a great hit as the Peacock in the bird number of the revue and will again have a leading role in the show.

As Miss Dorothy Kiplinger, Mrs. Charles Allison, well known for her delicate beauty, was one of the hits of the prologue in May, 1921. Her wedding was one of the social events of last fall. She, too, is to appear this year in the annual Junior League frolic.

It is hoped that still unmarried members of the league will be inspired in 1922 to live up to the precedent set them by this attractive trio.
