

Butler Promises Tax Relief if Named Governor

Commissioner Favors "Code Bill" Repeal and "Law Enforcement" in Campaign Statement.

Dan B. Butler issued the following statement yesterday:

"Having signified my acceptance of the filing made by my friends as a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor, I consider it my duty to state my position on vital public questions.

"The crying need at this time is for economy. The people demand and they are entitled to relief from oppressive taxation.

"If elected governor I promise to use the power of my office to secure that relief.

"To that end I favor the repeal of the 'Code bill' and the repeal of the revenue law of 1921, and will so recommend to the legislature.

Would Abolish Boards.

"The practice that has grown up in recent years of appropriating vast sums of money to be spent by appointed state officers and apportioned to various counties, is pernicious and leads to extravagance and waste. The remedy is to leave to local authorities the levying and expenditure of money so that officials responsible and responsible to the people who pay the taxes will determine the necessity of and have control over the expenditure of money.

"I favor abolition of all useless boards, bureaus and tribunals whose only purpose is interference with private affairs at the expense of the taxpayer.

Favors Law Enforcement.

"I am for vigorous and impartial enforcement of all laws and, if elected governor, I will use the full power of my office and the power vested in me by law to compel enforcement of all laws by local officials.

"In asking for the support of the democratic party at the coming primary election, I will state that I am not affiliated with, nor will I be the candidate of any clique, combination or self appointed boss. If elected I will be governor of all the people. Whatever promises or pledges I make will be made directly and openly to the people. My record as a public official of the city of Omaha for 16 years is a record of promises kept."

Omaha Man Will Speak for N. Y. Radio Program

New York, April 24.—(Special.)—Omaha will be especially interested in the radio program from "WV," the government broadcasting station of Bedloe's Island in New York harbor, Monday evening April 24, as a former Nebraska man will have an important place on it. He is R. A. Shiverick, who received his high school training in Omaha, and who is now president of the Allen-Powers Co., Inc., eastern representatives of Clermont steam automobiles.

Mr. Shiverick will talk on "The Romance of Steam," and radio fans of Omaha will be able to hear him, if the atmospheric conditions are good, since "WV" station is a powerful one and carries a longer distance than the average radio broadcasting station.

The Allen-Powers company is interested in the development of the Clermont Steamer, one of the newest and snappiest automobiles which has steam for its motive power. It is being demonstrated in New York at the present time.

RADIO DEPARTMENT

Government Finds New Way to Light Electron Tubes

Washington, April 24.—Elimination of the storage battery, the most expensive part of the home made radio receiving set, is now possible, according to the bureau of standards of the Department of Commerce.

The receiving sets require battery to light the filaments of the electron tubes. The new set developed by the bureau of standards makes connection with the ordinary electric lamp socket.

SPARKS

The radio glide, the latest step, in dancing to radio music—if the dancers are lucky enough to find the music. You take two steps forward, shuffle, clap your hands, and then hesitate.

In making a regenerative set employing two variometers and a variocoupler, be careful not to get the instruments too close together. If they are the set will howl. A set of this type should be mounted in a box not less than 16 inches long.

Twice a day at the Great Lakes naval training station in Chicago the reports from 25 weather stations in this country and Canada are received and broadcasted. The broadcasting takes place at 11 a. m. and at 10:30 p. m.

Radio Bug Attacks Omaha Department of Justice

The radio bug lit in the department of justice office yesterday.

"I had a complete receiving set in this office ever since I took it over, but didn't know it," E. W. Byrn, special agent, admitted. "I was going to throw it out a dozen times, but it looked too good, so I kept it."

The radio outfit probably was confiscated from a pro-German during the war, before Byrn was assigned to this office, he believes.

B. J. Hancock, one of the staff who reads the radio column before breakfast, spied the outfit yesterday morning. He took it to several radio experts, who are at loss to define its kind. It has the usual crystal detector, but also an extra set of coils, the use for which no one can detect.

Hancock announces "he will solve the mystery if it takes all summer."

The Dancing Master

By RUBY M. AYRES. (Copyright, 1922.)

She came back to Elizabeth, reached up and kissed her chin. "And now you be good," she pleaded; "you not make me so unhappy. You be good little miss and I make you the greatest dancer in London—I promise you."

Elizabeth shrugged her shoulders. "If it will please you," she said wearily.

Madame clapped her hands. "And now we friends again—he? We forgive each other all round; we all happy once more. No work today; you take a long holiday today. Go out; you buy some pretty clothes; you spend lots of money."

"Neil Farmer's money," said Elizabeth in a hard voice.

A dull patch of color showed in Madame's white cheeks; she could not understand Elizabeth's obstinacy. One man's money was as good as another's to her if in the end it obtained what she required.

She sought about in her mind for words with which to reply, but she was spared the difficulty by the appearance of the old housekeeper at the door.

"You excuse me," she went quickly away, closing the door after her. Elizabeth heard voices in the hall, but she hardly listened. She sat down on the piano stool, her hands folded in her lap.

Was Madame right, after all, she wondered; and in a few years' time would she be able to look back on her present misery and realize that, after all, love was nothing?

Pat Royston met so many women—he would forget her.

The thought hurt intolerably; because she knew that she would never be able to forget him or care for anybody else.

The door opened again, and, thinking it was Mme. Senestis returned, Elizabeth said, trying to speak naturally:

"I think, if you don't mind, I would rather work today. I don't want to go out; I would much rather work."

There was a moment's silence; then a voice said:

"It is not Mme. Senestis, Miss Conyers."

Elizabeth swung round on the stool, the blood rushing to her face as she met Neil Farmer's abashed eyes.

He came quickly forward. "Miss Conyers—forgive me. I beg your pardon, from the bottom of my heart. I behaved like a cad. I would give anything in the world to undo my conduct last night. I looked for you everywhere. Forgive me, I beg of you! Not in the least because I deserve it, but because if you refuse I shall never know a moment's peace again."

Elizabeth looked at him, and her anger died. After all, what did it matter? She was quite indifferent to him; it could make no difference whether she forgave him or not.

"I never want to speak of it again," she said.

"But that is not forgiveness," he urged. His voice sounded really distressed.

treased. "Madame has told me that you said you never wished to see me any more. That is only just, but I beg of you not to be so hard. At least let me see you sometimes. My greatest interest now is in your career; I will do anything you like to show you my deep contrition."

Elizabeth's face hardened. "I shall not go on with my lessons if it means that you are to pay for them," she said.

"You are punishing me too severely," he protested. "I give you my word of honor—if after what has happened you will accept it—that I will never give you cause again to resent anything I say or do." Miss Conyers, if you knew how—how rotten I feel about it all! It's no excuse, I know, but I do beg of you to believe that I'm not such a cad as to—as to . . ." he floundered helplessly.

Elizabeth did not speak, and he went on again.

"What will you do if you throw up this work? Go out as a companion, or some abomination like that? You are not fitted for it; it would break your heart in a week. For your own sake, I beg of you to listen to me. You've got the world at your feet. I know it, and so does Mme. Senestis. You've got it in your power to be rich and famous. If it's only the money—my money that angers you —I swear that I will let you repay every penny it has cost me; you will be able to, and more besides. Miss Conyers—"

"Hot Tamala King" Jailed on Disorderly House Charge

Judge Day in district court yesterday afternoon sentenced William Houston, "hot tamala king," to 90 days in jail on a charge of operating an ill-governed house at 1412 Chicago street.

"And when you get out," said the jurist, "you'd better get older women working for you. Your place is not decent enough for young girls."

Houston was fined $100 recently in police court on a similar charge for his place at 1310 Jones street, when welfare workers found girls under age working in his place.
