

Audubon Society to Hold Field Day

The annual field day of the Nebraska Audubon society will be held today. Groups of bird lovers will go to Fontenelle Forest reserve, south of the city, and watch the birds. Between 80 and 100 kinds of feathered people are usually seen on this occasion.

One group will leave Twenty-fourth and N streets by interurban electric car at 7 and another at 8 a. m. Another group will leave the Burlington station at 9:05. Many school teachers will be in the party. Ornithological experts from the colleges will go. Everyone is welcome. Lunches will be carried and the bird lovers will return to the city by mid-afternoon. Dr. Solon R. Towne, honorary president of the society, will be in charge.
