Several years ago the raters had what is known as lateral No. 1 as an organization they had to work harmoniously in the interests of repair and maintenance. It was believed that the intent and purpose of the irrigation district provided that the district should provide for the water at the land for which it was intended, which would be the lateral was properly of the district system, and the water was instituted to compel such by a majority of the board directors. One member of the board was a rater, thus the case was instituted as against the other two and the defendant company. The court holds in its decision that the principle is correct, and mandating the board to proceed with the maintenance of the lateral capacity as is needed to give raters their proportionate share equally with others. As an important case there is not such large amount, but if the principle of established it will have a far-reaching effect in the irrigated section.
