

Record Fruit Crop Predicted for Nebraska

Work in the intensive campaign for the record fruit crop in Nebraska... Federal Bureau of Estimates Announces Outlook for Present is for Larger Crop Than in 1919.

Lincoln—One of the largest and heaviest fruit crops experienced in Nebraska for a number of years is in prospect this year, chiefly due to favorable climatic conditions, the high vitality of trees, the almost complete failure of last year's crop and the light crop of 1920, according to information received by the federal bureau of markets and crop estimates.

Together with these conclusions, reached in reports from state and government agents, the prospect is more favorably enhanced by the fact that the crop virtually is assured, there being little possibility that a cold snap or a late frost will visit the state between now and harvest time, according to the bureau.

We are unable at this time to appraise the commercial or farm production, but the present condition of all fruits indicates that the production of 1919, the largest in recent years, should be equaled and possibly exceeded, says the chief of the bureau.

Apples Come First. The commercial apple crop is the largest fruit industry in Nebraska, although small fruit contributes a tidy sum to the individual grower in favorable years.

Small fruits, which include strawberries, blackberries, raspberries, currants and other berries, netted 647,321 quarts in 1920, produced from 1,147 acres, the records show.

Cherries are second in importance in the Nebraska fruit industry, the bureau states, and this year show indications of setting a new record in production.

With the campaigns being waged by various agricultural societies and institutions, looking toward the better care and development of fruit trees and vines, however, much of the loss sustained should be returned within the next few years," the bureau declares.

There are hundreds of cows that have produced more than 20,000 pounds of milk in a year under official supervision and there are thousands of cows that have produced at least half this amount, yet there are millions that are consuming as much food and require as much labor as those that are producing 10,000 pounds or less a year," says a statement.

Farmers' Union Notes. Farmers are buying more hay and harvesting machinery than at any time since the agricultural depression.

Box Raisers Convention. The convention of the Box Raisers County Farmers union will be held here on June 10.
