Editorial Remarks

To many the smallness of the score at Denver comes as a surprise, and the frequent fumbling that occurred has given rise to much comment. It is certainly not an evidence of University spirit to belittle the magnitude of a victory by bringing up points of discussion in regard to some failing displayed at some time in the game by our own team. Nebraska had conditions to battle against that would phase the strongest and best trained teams. The altitude alone would under many conditions have been able to accomplish the downfall of even a strong team like our own. Furthermore, Denver had a strong team and a heavy one, trained by a Princeton coach in our own style of play, and although the fumbling can not be entirely excused, there were conditions entering in that were most disadvantageous to our team.

Our team went into the enemy's country, overcame the exigencies of natural conditions and the strength of their opponents and brought back the victory, without allowing their goal line to be crossed. This was an achievement of which we may well be proud, and it shows up in the most advantageous light the stuff of which our boys are made and their determined hardy spirit. Some of the players should have been on the bench instead of in the game, and it was their grit alone that carried them through. The field was a strange one and was not smooth and hard like the one they had been used to. They were obliged to play ankle-deep in sand, which, though one of their ingredient qualities, greatly impeded them in their plays. Taking all these unfavorable conditions into consideration the victory is indeed one in which we may rejoice.

Thursday evening over the Rock Island road.

A special car was provided for the team, each man having a lower berth to himself.

They arrived in Denver in good shape Friday afternoon about 1:15, their train being over an hour late.

Arrangements were made to entertain the team at the Adams. This is a comparatively new and rather small, but exceptionally nice hotel, on the corner of Eighteenth and Welton Sts., only two blocks east of the Brown.

The hotel was full and all the team could not be lodged there, so part of it went across the street to "The Cob" which is run in connection with the Adams.

After a brief rest the team was taken out to Broadway Park, where the game was to be played the next day.

They were given over an hour's signal practice there. The ground, however, was against them from the start. It is very sandy and "gravelly," making it almost impossible to get a footing, which fact completely undid the back field for any quick starting, and made end runs a physical impossibility.

The team returned to the Adams at about 6 o'clock. They dined there and strolled about the city until 9:30, as Booth's orders were for every man to be in bed by 10 o'clock.

Breakfast Saturday morning at 7:30. Then the team was at liberty until 10:30, when they all assembled for a walk.

Luncheon was served at 12:30 and at 12:30 all left for the park.

This park is used during the summer for baseball games and has a seating capacity of 5,000.

The field runs east and west and was marked off in accordance with this year's rules—the five yard marking for quarterback runs.

About 2 o'clock the people began to come in. The cars running past the entrance were all crowded. The attendance was, however, away below the hopes and expectations of the Denver managers.

Nevertheless it was an enthusiastic throng. Both teams were heartily cheered as they came on the field. Many times during the game the familiar—"U-U-Ui" of Nebraska rang out from Denver magaphones, which showed the good will of the people. This feature was not only expressed in the grandstand, but on the field also.

It was a clean, pretty game throughout, and although some slight bruises were sustained the game was entirely devoid of unnecessary roughness. The Denver men are all gentleman, each and every one of them and Nebraska proved that the team was a match for them on that score as well as in the game.

Mayor White of Denver was present with a good-sized party, also the governor of Colorado, Governor Peabody, came with a party of friends.

The grandstand was one mass of colors in which the scarlet and cream of Nebraska was quite freely mixed with the red and yellow of Denver.

One of the pretty features of the afternoon was the number of tally-ho parties which came in along the lines. The wagons were decorated most lavishly with Denver colors and filled with young men and women, who cheered their team lustily. Their favorite call or rather chant, as they kept it up for five of ten minutes, was:

"Pretty work. D. U. Pretty work. —D. U."

The game ended just as darkness was stealing upon the white capped mountains and making daylight its prisoner. The last "Rah! Rah!" of the Denver men faded into that purple dusk which is the enchantress of the mountain city.

The team left for Lincoln at 9:30 p. m. from the Union depot. The Denver team was there to see them off and give a final hearty cheer of good fellowship.

The trip will long be remembered as it is imprinted as deep in the minds of the team as is the blue of those mountains skies.

Second Team Bests the Medics.

The scrubs defeated the Lincoln Medics Saturday afternoon by a score of 12 to 0. The game abounded in features that were hardly creditable to either side, yet some fine plays were made and the second team did some excellent work at times. The Medics played up to a good standard and contested every inch of the ground. They executed one clever fake play, but failed miserably on several succeeding attempts. The game attracted a fair-sized crowd and gave the second team a good chance to show their strength.

Unions Have Large Meeting.

The Union Boys Debating club met Saturday night in Union hall. There were about twenty-five present and unusual interest was shown in the meeting. After a spirited parliamentary practice of half an hour, the following question was debated: "Resolved, That the University of Nebraska should not accept the Rockefeller gift." Messrs. Melick and Bovee held up the affirmative, while Brown and Kajtcek supported the negative. After the principal speakers had finished everybody in the hall was called upon to give his views upon the question and responded entertainingly.

In the business meeting which followed, the challenge from Doane for a joint debate was unanimously accepted. According to precedent established the Union team, which will be chosen later by the president, will go to Doane probably some time in January. The Union boys will choose the question and the Doane boys will have the choice of sides.

The question, which has been advocated in University circles, of each society, sorority and fraternity giving an entertainment at the College Settlement was also taken up, and it was agreed that the Union Boys should do its share. The chairman appointed a committee composed of Messrs. James, McReynolds and Hanlen to determine upon an appropriate program. The committee will report next Saturday night.

A discussion then arose over the admission of new members. It has been the custom of the past two or three years that anyone who attended the meetings and signed the constitution was a member of the club. It was found, however, on examining the constitution, that it provides that new members be admitted by a two-thirds vote and must also sign the constitution. This clause was objected to but the consensus of opinion was with the constitution. Fifteen names were voted upon and accepted. Invitations were extended to these men to sign the constitution and the membership was considerably increased.

A letter from W. F. Meier, well known to all University students, was read and received with much enthusiasm. He praised the work done by the debating clubs and urged men to attend them regularly, as much good can be gotten from them. He pointed out the fact that the honor of the University in debate depends to considerable extent upon the success of the debating clubs.

The following question was chosen for next Saturday night: "Resolved, That the United States should enact more stringent immigration laws."
