Editorial Remarks

Colorado plays tomorrow. This is the team over which so much discussion has been aroused and in tomorrow's game an unusual degree of interest is centered. Last year Colorado put up a hard fight against our team aided as they were by the advantages of playing at home and in being acclimated to an altitude that mitigated greatly against Nebraska in its play. It is said that those coming from a high altitude to a lower one are not affected like those going from a low one to a higher. This seems strange, but there is no need of stopping to ponder over the fact. We do not wish to see the Colorado team hindered by exigencies of any kind, but prefer to meet them in their full strength and best condition.

There is no doubting the fact that Colorado has a strong team. Although they are considered as an unknown quantity, reliable assurances are constantly forthcoming that Nebraska in meeting them will have worthy opponents to face. The team is heavy and well coached, and it will be a pleasure to see them matched against Nebraska's speed, aggressiveness and science. For, judging from the improvement that is being constantly shown by our team, Saturday's game will be a revelation even to those who have watched their development closely.

Football is every year gaining a stronger hold in western colleges, and each season witnesses some vast improvements in many of the teams in this section. The Colorado teams have been making vast strides and may in the near future be strong rivals of our own. Even here it is felt that our present team actually excels last year's great team in certain respects, and every movement looking to its further progress should be pushed enthusiastically by our students. There is no reason why we should not grow even greater, as Nebraska brawn, sinew and intellect are as good as the best. Hence, any opportunity to help along the progress of the team should not be neglected.

And tomorrow an opportunity will be given the students to do work that can not help but have a wholesome effect. They can turn out and do all in their power to make the victory over Colorado all the more complete. Their mere presence will count for much, but the exercise of their vocal powers will count for more.

Students should not lose sight of the fact that the literary societies extend to them a standing invitation to visit and make themselves at home. The societies are all hospitable and cordial in their treatment of guests and students who are not especially occupied when these meetings are being held will profit by attending them.

The Haskell Indians are taking their defeat in fairly good grace, although they probably do not care to say that they are glad that they were defeated. They claim that Nebraska held in the line, but in comparison to allegations often made by defeated teams this complaint does not count for much. In fact Nebraska beat them so completely that they can hardly invent a reason for their defeat.

Our attention has again been drawn to a pamphlet entitled "The University Lecture Bureau," which has been compiled recently and which can be obtained at the executive office. The pamphlet contains subjects of lectures offered by professors of this University in their special departments. This bureau is under the direction of the committee on University extension work, of which Mrs. B. M. Clark is secretary.

Hammond-McNish Wedding.

Jesse McNish and Miss Clara Hammond, both formerly popular University students, were married at the home of the bride's parents in Lincoln, last evening. Quite a number of guests were present. Miss Stuart played the wedding march and George Bartlett was master of ceremonies. Charles Schwartz acted as best man, and Anna Hammond, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. A sister of the groom was flower bearer. The wedding party left for Kansas City at 1 o'clock this morning, from which point they go to Chicago and will visit at various places in the east. They will make their home at Wisner, where Mr. McNish is engaged in the practice of law.

Will Entertain Coloradans.

It is planned to entertain the Colorado football team and the rooters accompanying them at the Band Informal Saturday evening. When Nebraska was at Colorado last year our boys were royally entertained and the best of treatment was accorded us at Denver two weeks ago. Here is an opportunity to reciprocate. There should be a large crowd on hand Saturday evening at the armory to show Colorado that, though we of necessity must beat them Saturday afternoon, our hearts are in the right place.
