DR. BESSEY BACK.
Returns From His Extended Tour in Europe and Asia.

After four months of travel through Europe and Asia on a botanical expedition, Dr. Bessey is again with us. He arrived yesterday morning and all day yesterday was spent in his office answering correspondence. The itinerary of Dr. Bessey's trip is as follows:

Leaving here on June 29 he went direct to New York, from there to Liverpool, arriving July 16. Then going to London he spent a few days visiting old acquaintances. From here he went to Halle, Germany, where his son Ernest Bessey, '96, is studying for his Ph. D. After spending two or three days at Halle, Dr. Bessey and son went to Berlin, then to Warsaw, and here the botanizing began. In and about Moscow several days were spent, looking over the old, yet beautiful city of historic fame. Striking south they crossed the Russian Steppes, a country wild and rugged and full of striking scenery, especially since traveling conveyances are of a very primitive kind. Coming into the Caucasus region, about the middle of August, they traveled on the north side of the Caucasus mountains, until the Mamisson Pass was reached. This is the highest pass by which the mountains are to be crossed and five days were spent in crossing. It was for the historic interest connected with this pass that Dr. Bessey selected it, and because most everybody else takes the other. They were now on the south side and made their way to Tiflis, an old frontier city, very peculiarly composed of the old and the new civilizations. They here spent two weeks in sight-seeing and botanizing, and then going southeast across the country they came to the region of Mr. Ararat, that famous old land-mark, towering above all others, with a cap of perpetual snow. Some time was spent in Erivan, which Dr. Bessey says was the hottest place he ever struck or ever hopes to be in again. Returning to Tiflis they came westward to the east end of the Black Sea, and took the steamer at Balum, coasted along the northerly side of the Black Sea, stopping at Yalta. This is a tropical country and profuse in vegetation, although the country immediately across the mountains is bleak and cold. From Yalta they crossed over to Sebastopol, where some days were spent. Taking the steamer to Odessa several days were spent there, and they went on to Vienna. From here they traveled through north Austria and stopped at Prague, called Prag by the Germans, and Pracha by the residents, who are mostly Bohemian. Dresden was next visited, after which they returned to Halle. Dr. Bessey says this has been the trip of his life and was satisfactory in every respect. Ernest Bessey went on a government commission in the interests of botany, gathering and purchasing material whenever it was to be procured.

The fact that he is conversant with foreign languages and also a specialist in botany rendered him most helpful to Dr. Bessey and the trip was highly enjoyed by both. Ernest Bessey remained at Halle, where he will take his Ph. D. next year.
