Editorial Remarks

Today is the day upon which, according to all signs and portents, the Cornhusker warriors will demonstrate their superiority over Colorado. The westerners are here and all is in readiness for the battle. Do not be deceived into thinking that Nebraska will not have to work hard for a victory, for the men from the mountains are strong, well-trained and husky. Bear in mind the strength that was shown by this team last year and the likelihood of improvement having been made, before you figure on the margin of Nebraska's victory.

The game will be of the whirlwind order all the way through, and there will be enough of interest and excitement to rouse the spirits of all. Come out and see the vast improvement that Nebraska is making. Do not wait until Thanksgiving, for by doing so you will be missing much that you would have been glad to see had you known the character of entertainment provided. We have a team, of which any University in the west might well be proud, and it is the duty of all to show their pride by coming out and cheering it on its march to victory. Energetic and enthusiastic rooting counts, and the more present the better will be the results. Take an afternoon off and come out and show that you are cognizant of the fact that we have the best team in the west, and give a substantial evidence of your loyalty.

We wish to call the attention of our readers to the new appointments we have made to our staff. The names appear at the head of our editorial column. All of these new staff members are taking work in the Journalism class and each has shown sufficient competence and ability to entitle them to the place. The task of gathering news for The Nebraskan is not a light one, and the perseverance that they have shown in the work warrants their appointment on our staff.

It is a pleasure to us all to extend a greeting to the visiting teachers and superintendents. We are glad to have with us visitors of such intelligence and experience, who can appreciate and are eager to examine into the workings of our institution. Many of them are old graduates, whom we are glad to welcome back to the scenes of their former activities. To them it will be interesting to note the tremendous strides that this University is making, and all can not fail to be impressed by what they observe. All departments have been opened to their inspection, and our University authorities have shown a true spirit of hospitality in providing for their entertainment.

Chancellor Strong, in a recent address before the students of the University of Kansas, strongly urged them to defer from any ungentlemanly acts in their treatment of the Nebraska team during the coming game at Lawrence. He called to mind the disgraceful incident of last spring, out of which much bitterness and misunderstanding grew. Although we do not like to see our own interests imposed upon or to make any uncalculated concession we all desire to see friendly relations existing between this University and our neighboring institution. If the Kansans show the right spirit we will show that we can appreciate it, and we trust that Dr. Strong's advice to the students of that University will have a wholesome effect.
