Editorial Remarks

The heavy condition of the athletic field interferes with practice at present and little opportunity has been afforded the players for shaping themselves up for Saturday's game with Knox. It is not known whether Knox measures up to its last year's standard or not, but it has played some fine games and seems strong. The hard game of last year will not soon be forgotten—the game which was fought out in the mud, the slippery condition of the field preventing fast play and long runs.

But this year if the field is in good condition Nebraska hopes to display her superiority in a decided manner. The mere fact that Knox is a member of the Big Nine renders her defeat an end very desirable to accomplish. This game is one of the two biggest games of the season, and one that ought to bring out a record-breaking crowd. This will be the first conference team to have played here, and we are all curious to see how Nebraska will show up against the Big Nine this year, and whether the good work begun at Iowa City can not be helped along another notch toward perfection. The team will have some hard work before it from now on, and the students can render their burden lighter by turning out to watch them practice.

While it is distasteful to many of us to think that our goal line has been crossed, this fact should not cause serious disturbance to anyone. No team is infallible even to such a degree that it can win all its games, let alone not being scored against. There are a thousand chances that would permit of an inferior team scoring against a strong one. A blunder in the signals, a tardy movement in a play, or the possibility that a second of time might give rise to some little accident that would be responsible for a touchdown, and we ought to be thankful indeed that our team has steered clear of all these contingencies as well as it has. There is as much reason in feeling wrought up over our goal line being crossed as there is in condemning a general because he allowed some of his men to be killed in winning a battle. The measure of loyalty is about the same in either case. There is certainly little evidence of spirit or even manliness in anyone who allows himself to become pessimistic and despondent because our team has been scored against.

The Engineering society has set a pace in contributing to the Temple Fund that all of the other University organizations should seek to follow. While the engineers have no greater facilities at hand than many of the other organizations, in the University for raising $100, they displayed an interest and an energy that it would be good for the others to pattern after, accomplishing as they did by active work an end of no mean proportions. By their industry they have made plain to the others their duty and it is hoped that their undertaking may inaugurate a series of similar ones, affecting every organization in the University.

Class football has been set back by the bad weather this past week, and none of the teams have had any good opportunity to practice. There are a number of good games in view, and it is hoped the classes will each take enough interest in its team to come out and help it on to victory.

Postpone Senior-Academy Game

The game between the Senior class and the Academy football teams is postponed until next week. The unfit condition of the grounds made it advisable to play the game later.

Will Hold Recognition Services.

On Sunday afternoon the Y. W. C. A. will give a recognition service to the fifty new members who have been taken in this year. All the new girls are urged to come and be welcomed and the old members to come and help welcome them.—Sunday, 3 p. m., U. 106.

Cross Country Running.

The second cross country run took place yesterday afternoon, the team of runners leaving the armory shortly after 4 o'clock. States, the captain of the track team last year, will lead in these runs in the future. A number of new men have appeared or signified their intention of joining making about twenty in all.

Maxwell Debate.

The Maxwell Debating club will debate the following question Friday evening, Nov. 6: "Resolved, That illiterate persons shall not be allowed to vote." The affirmative will be supported by Theobald and Sawyer, while Barta and Mormon will hold up the negative end of the argument.
