Editorial Remarks

We are glad to see the general interest that is being taken in increasing the amount already raised on the Temple Fund. The Y. M. C. A., the Engineering society, the Freshman class and the Lincoln Commercial club have all taken steps toward contributing to the success of the undertaking. It is now up to the other organizations to do their share, and if each does what it is able to do, no other result can come to pass than the fullest success.

Kansas, after going to the last extreme, has waived her protest. We have gained our point and have nothing more to say on that subject. The excursion can go now and the game can be played. All that is necessary for us to do is to go to Lawrence in as great force as possible, and help our team make its victory a memorable one. There will be plenty of opposition and it is hoped that a sufficiently large representation from here will be there to offset it to a large extent. Our team will win by a substantial score, although it can not be reckoned upon with certainty.

The Athletic Carnival will occupy the center of attention this afternoon, and it is the duty of us all to turn out and see the sights. The faculty are about to act in a capacity in which probably none of us will ever see them act again. We seldom have the privilege of seeing them vie in athletic contests—much less watching them race together and trundle wheelbarrows for our gratification. And while enjoying the amusement afforded, we should not lose sight of the worthy purpose that is being served. The College Settlement will be substantially benefited, and it is our place to help along the good work.

The modifications made by the inter-class athletic board in the rules governing class athletics include a number of desirable features. The students of the law school and medical college will be allowed to take part in class events, which will raise their standard, and the competition for places on the teams will be greater and embrace a larger field. In this way the unity of the students in these different colleges will be promoted to some extent, and especially their relations as fellow classmen. The rule obliging the members of the class teams to have at least two weeks membership on the Scrub eleven has been struck out, thus removing an obstacle that stood much in the way. Also, many more will be able to enter the contest for places than before, and the question of obtaining recognition will be one of merit alone. Taken altogether the changes made tend to benefit class athletics, as well as to raise their standard.

"The Christianity of Tolstoi," is to be the subject of Rev. J. Lewis Marsh's sermon at All Souls' church next Sunday morning. This sermon has been previously given by Mr. Marsh, but will be repeated by request next Sunday.

All Souls' church is located at the corner of 12th and H streets. All seats are free and you are welcome.

The proposed tariff policy for England was debated in English 17, the advanced course in debated yesterday afternoon. E. F. Myers and L. C. Lightner argued for the affirmative and John T. Milek for the negative. The discussion, which called out a good deal of rapid-fire rebuttal, brought up several interesting matters of use of material and tactics.

The faculty ladies will not serve tea this afternoon, owing to the Athletic Carnival. Next Friday tea will be served in the art studio instead of the rest room. All young women connected with the University should take this opportunity to visit the rooms of the art department and meet members of the faculty.

The University Y. W. C. A. will meet with the city Y. W. C. A. next Sunday afternoon at 4 p. m. at the city association's rooms, 12th and N streets. Dr. Swearingen will probably speak. Every girl is invited.

The Palladian Boys will debate the following question tomorrow night in Palladian hall: "Resolved, That Freshman and Sophomore drill is more beneficial than gymnasium work."

Work in English literature 6 has been delayed by slowness in filling the orders for "Carlyle's French Revolution" the next work to be taken up. Work in Tennyson will be continued.
