

Helped Make Nebraska Famous

HUNTER, Guard.

One day, a couple of years ago, there ambled up to the University from the Lincoln High School a great tall, well built fellow, by the name of Mason, "Cy" Mason. He had played on the High School team for three years at both tackle and end and like Alexander of old sighed for new fields—he found them here.

Last year he played on the 'Varsity at tackle and did such good work that he was put right back in the same old place this year.

He is always in the game, both on the offensive and defensive and the man against whom he is playing always knows it.

Cotton is a Cornhusker clear to the marrow of his bones and has in him that indescribable something which characterizes all of Nebraska's men. His home is in Syracuse, where he played for two years on the High School team as fullback.

Last year was his first in the University, and he made the 'Varsity, playing in the line at guard.

His playing was and is strong and aggressive and with his weight he has done much toward strengthening the Nebraska line.

He is a hard consistent worker, and plays the game for the sake of the game, which is the secret of all successful football playing.

EAGER, Halfback.

Hunter comes from Kansas—from Blue Rapids, Kansas. We're very glad he didn't play against instead of with Nebraska in our games against the team from his native state.

In the sunny land from whence he came football never claimed his attention, and not until he became a student here was he initiated into the mysteries of the pig skin.

Last year was his first in the game, and well and valiantly did he make up for lost time. He started in at guard and stayed there, guarding most nobly the sacred goal of Nebraska.

His playing last year was exceptionally good and he early proved his aptitude by the manner in which he entered into the game.

He has played the position of right guard on this year's team and done splendid work. We earnestly hope that he may be here for some seasons yet to come.

Eager's name is one with which all lovers of the game are familiar and it has a very pleasant sound. He is an old Lincoln High School man, having played three years on that team.

This makes his third year in Nebraska football and we sincerely hope he will add one more.

He played last year as substitute half and has been playing this year in the position of left half. His offensive work is consistent and good and his defensive play is strong and telling.

Marsh hails from Omaha and was one of the best halves that that High School ever developed. He played for three years on the team at right half and made a good name for himself.

Last year he played on the 'Varsity second team and made a good showing.

This year he has been a substitute for left half and whenever in the game proved himself to be a sure ground gainer.

MARSH.

He is quick to see an opening and to take advantage of it.

Glen Mason came to the University from the Lincoln High School, where he has played for two years at left end.

He made the 'Varsity early in the season, filling the position of fullback with great credit.

His work is to be highly commended along all lines. He has done much toward strengthening the Nebraska back field, and plays the game till the last whistle blows.

We are hoping that next year will see him back in the same position.

Perry, a new man this year, comes from Norfolk, Neb. He played for four years on the High School team of that place, during which time he played seven games.

He has been playing right tackle on the 'Varsity this year and his work has been of a high standard. He is short and chunky, but by no means light and uses every ounce of his weight to good advantage. He will make a most valuable man for the team next year.

Robertson, also a new man this year, comes from Omaha, where he played for three years on the High School team, being captain of that team last year.

He is tall strong and very speedy.
