Editorial Remarks

The following article we clip in its entirety from the Kansas University Weekly:

"The Daily Nebraskan, of last Wednesday, has an interesting editorial on Nebraska's football outlook for next year. Aside from pointing out that Nebraska is in a position to secure games next year with Iowa, Illinois and Minnesota, the editorial says that Nebraska has proven her ability to play up to the "Big Nine" standard. The editorial says: "Success in college football is not confined to winning alone, but to creating and maintaining friendly relations with other institutions and encouraging sportsmanlike conduct on the part of ourselves and by our example on the part of our opponents. That is the true secret of college athletics and we believe that much has been done here this year towards promoting the means to such a desirable end. In meeting such strong teams as may be scheduled for next year, we have two opportunities, both of which are apparent. We will have an opportunity to excel all past records and to strengthen our ties with other institutions. Both of these aims are of equal importance, and a double victory will be ours if both are realized."

Such ideas coming from Nebraska does our hearts good, especially since Kansas did her share in teaching Nebraska the importance and truth of such ideas. It is sad, though, to think that Nebraska is making up at such a late date. Although Kansas does not consider herself a possible rival of the "Big Nine" teams, she would enjoy a few more games with Nebraska.

Keep up the good work, Nebraska, we heartily approve of your new ideas. We are indeed glad that you will have an opportunity to excel all your past records, and we rejoice with you in the thought that you believe in strengthening your ties with other institutions.

The statement that Kansas did her share in teaching Nebraska the importance and truth of "such ideas" is amusing. Kansas could never formulate an idea, much less teach it to anyone else. She may believe that we have taken warning from her record, as a horrible example, and although that in itself would be sufficient in many instances to turn anyone from following in the same path, we have never laid ourselves open to the necessity of an object lesson. We admire the modesty that Kansas displays in not considering herself as a possible rival of the "Big Nine" but we would certainly have cause for surprise if she did consider herself such. We can not blame her for feeling that she would enjoy a game with Nebraska. However, practically all the minor places on our schedule are filled and Kansas must wait awhile.

We fully intend to keep up our good work, being fortified in the knowledge that Kansas has exhorted us to. And since Kansas so heartily approves of our "new ideas" we think it would be advisable for her to change her course and profit by them. She is glad that we have an opportunity to excel all our past records and rejoices with us in the thought that we believe in strengthening our ties with other institutions. This can be traced to the sympathy she feels for us because she has rendered it impossible for herself to schedule games with us, and after inflicting such a frightful calamity she may think that some reparation is due. And now we wish to thank the Kansas paper for the mildness it has displayed in dealing with our enormities, and the concern it has shown in the future of athletics at this University. With such influential moral support our path will be made easier, and when we have climbed to still greater heights and look backward upon the glorious record we have made, we will ever think kindly of our Kansas neighbors who hauled us out of the mire and started us along the straight and narrow way to higher and better achievements.

The chances seem good for a body of cadets from this University being sent to the St. Louis fair next summer. Quite a number of men in the battalion had previously intended going, and to most of these the idea is especially inviting. To others the chance offered now has opened the way so that they might be able to attend although previously having no thought of doing so. No one doubts the desirability of taking advantage of this opportunity. The only question is the possibility. Considerable time yet remains in which to settle this point. In the meanwhile each man will be able to consider matters or himself and make up his mind. It is seldom that many of the cadets have such an opportunity for an outing of this character, and only in this way can a large number of them find it possible to attend the fair. The matter should be kept in sight, until some definite conclusion can be arrived at as to what our University can do.

We would advise all who can find it convenient, to attend as many of the lectures as possible that are being given on the University grounds this week by prominent speakers. Each man is a specialist and able to present in its fullest scope and meaning some important subjects. You can find much to interest you by attending. Try to attend part of them at least.

Y. W. C. A. Noon Service.

Miss Puffer led the noon service in the Y. W. C. A. rooms yesterday and addressed the girls of the association on the "Characteristics of Well Rounded Womanhood." She took as her ideal the late Alice Freeman Palmer, who did so much for college women, especially those in the west. A large number of young women were present and deeply appreciated Miss Puffer's talk. Miss Barbour will speak at the noon meeting today. All University girls are urged to attend.

Arrangements have been made to serve dinners at the State Farm during the meetings of the various societies there this week and the domestic science girls will assist in serving the meals.
