ADDRESS TO STUDENTS.

Prof. Upton of the University of Illinois at Chapel.

Professor Upton of the College of Agriculture at the University of Illinois, spoke to the people of the University yesterday morning at convocation period, during which time he said in part:

"This is my first trip to Nebraska and I assure you that the great longing I have always had to visit it, is at last satisfied. I have stood on the banks of the Big Muddy at Yankton S. D., and viewed the productive plains but this is the first time that I have ever traversed the soil. When I look over the list of able instructors of the University it furnishes sufficient evidence that you have something good and a great institution in Nebraska and the testimony of our University football players bear witness to the amount of brawn and skill your state has developed."

Speaking of the aim of the University student, he said: "Students should have 'push' and 'perseverance.' They should set a standard of honesty that is high and try to raise it, every effort in your college life should be to build up an honest, industrious character. That you can not consider too strongly. The man who wrecks a railroad system is too often called a great financier, while in fact he is merely great in dishonesty."

Mr. Upton went on giving good advice to the students, which was of much value for consideration and the practical ideas that came from him were relished by the attentive listeners.

It is quite profitable for us to have with us these competent representatives of the numerous agricultural meetings that are progressing in the city this week, and they will surely be productive of enthusing a farmer spirit into a large number of the University students, who might have forgotten the agreeable sensation of their boyhood happy days down on the farm.

And we are certainly fortunate in having our memories carried back to the times of merriment and repose of our early environment.

New American History Courses.

The following courses are open to students beginning work in the second semester:

L. E. Aylsworth—Courses 2 and 16. The consent of the instructor for course 1.

C. E. Persinger—Courses 2, 8, and 20, the latter two on consent of the instructor.

W. W. Cook—Courses 6 and 12a, on consent of the instructor.

H. W. Caldwell and C. E. Persinger—Course 45.

Roscoe Pound—Courses 14 and 23.

A New Course—"Teachers' Course in American History"—Two hours per week, Tues. and Thurs., at 4, that may be counted toward the teachers' certificate, will be offered by L. E. Aylsworth.

This course will be devoted to the methods, problems, needed and available materials, of the teaching, as opposed to the studying and writing of history. A knowledge of the elements of historical method, so essential to the teachers of history, will be assumed. In addition to methods proper, special attention will be given to the evolution and elements of an approved textbooks, the available outlines, topical references, works on teaching, maps, source documents or extracts, pictures, and histories best suited to the teacher, the pupil or class, and the library; the newer knowledge and interpretations of many events and movement in our history.

The ladies of the faculty will serve tea as usual in the rest room from 4:30 to 6 this afternoon. All young women of the University are cordially invited.
