

PLANS ARE READY

New School Building At Farm To Cost $50,000.

Plans for the new school building at the state farm have been received at the office of the superintendent of construction. They call for a building that has long been needed at the farm, and which will prove of great advantage in the work which the department of agriculture already has in hand or contemplation. The buildings now at the farm are much crowded by the necessity of holding recitations in the same rooms where laboratory work is conducted, which has proved a deplorable inconvenience all around. Besides this, however, the demand for further facilities which has been brought out by the necessity for undertaking work in entirely new lines, has become so insistent as to require immediate attention. The large barn just complete (a cut of which will appear in next Saturday's Nebraskan), while relieving the strain on some departments, has, by increasing the opportunities for further investigation, but made more pressing the call for more laboratories and class rooms.

The new building to commence erection soon will be aimed primarily to fill this demand. It will be a large two-story and basement structure, of hydraulic-pressed brick, such as will be employed in the new physics building on the Uni. campus. The plans call for the utmost simplicity of construction, and no decorations will be attempted except on the large main entrance, which will be largely finished in terracotta. The beauty of the building will not, however, be marred by this simplicity and it will doubtless be one of the handsomest as well as one of the most important of the new additions to the facilities of the University.

The building will be 140x65 feet in dimensions and will face east toward the experiment station. The basement will contain laboratories, animal husbandry and pathology class rooms, janitors' rooms and closets. Two small offices will also be situated there. There will be north and south entrances to the basement as well as the main entrance on the east.

The first floor will contain a large library room, which will be situated at the south end of the building and extend across its entire width. The dimensions will be 38x60 feet. Five large offices and a ladies' parlor will be situated on this floor, as well as two good-sized class rooms. In the second story there will be a large assembly room, just above the library, on the first floor. Its dimensions will be the same as those of the library. The floor will also contain physics and botany laboratories and mathematics, English and other class rooms. A northern entrance will be provided on the first floor.

The building will begin as soon as the contract is awarded and the weather moderates somewhat. It will probably be ready for use the middle of next year. The estimated cost of the completed structure is about $50,000.
