Editorial Remarks

The management of the Olympic games at the St. Louis exposition have erected a permanent gymnasium and a stadium with a seating capacity of 35,000 on the grounds of the exposition. The stadium being a counterpart of the historic Roman stadiums. After the close of the exposition both the gymnasium and stadium will become the property of the Washington university of St. Louis.

The girls' basket-ball team has at last made arrangements for a game with Minnesota. This announcement comes as a surprise, as it had been quite thoroughly understood that the Minnesota team would be unable to play us. Girls' basket-ball has become popular and attractive here and their team has also fields for conquest. Last year the team made a fine record, and if the one this year brings back the tresses of their opponents from Minneapolis they should be given a reception that would make the one accorded to the football team last year seem tame in comparison.

The tremendous progress that is being made at the state farm this year is indeed worthy of comment. Where formerly only two buildings stood to house the interests and facilities of our agricultural school, now a cluster is appearing and by the time all of the present buildings are completed our farm school will have in its possession resources of no mean importance. The growth of the agricultural school measures back more directly the support received by the farming people of the state, and we are glad to see the day at hand when their interests are receiving this important attention. The introduction of scientific methods into agriculture and dairying is working a change, and the most successful farmer in the future will be the one who is educated. The dissemination of knowledge concerning soils and fertilizers and the great bulk of other useful information that can be acquired by study will make the occupation one of skill and scientific methods. More has been done for the agricultural school within the time that Chancellor Andrews has been here than has ever been done before. It has been placed upon a basis where its work will count greatly and now that it has been provided with so many additional facilities, the school will certainly prosper.

What is the matter with the glee club? We know it exists and has been practicing faithfully all year, but we have not yet been favored with an opportunity to hear it. As we understand it, the plans of the club as to appearing here are rather indefinite. While we do not say that this is due to the lack of support in the past, yet it is a fact that the glee club has never received the support that it should. Last year we had a splendid club, well organized and trained, and yet university people did not take enough cognizance of its existence to come out and help make its concerts a financial success. Under such conditions it is difficult for any organization to thrive. A glee club is an advantage to any institution and we do not like to see ours so little appreciated as it has been in the past. We have one of the best glee clubs we ever had this year, and we would not like to see all the effort that has been spent in training it come to naught. We ought to be able to encourage our club in a substantial manner, and after it is well under way we would like the pleasure of hearing it.

The mass meeting has been postponed until tomorrow morning. This leaves us another day for working our spirits up to the proper pitch for this important occasion. Something is necessary to work up interest in basket ball here. The game is a good one and all our teams are good. Our first team has made a good showing this year and with enthusiastic support they ought to be able to give Wisconsin a game that would alone be to them worth coming all the distance that they have to play. This game will be the big one of the season, and those who failed to generally attend the contests that have already occurred should not fail to see the best of them. If we can furnish a good crowd for games that are worth having it will be easier to schedule games of this kind in the future. Wisconsin hopes to return home after having made a clean sweep, and we would like to be the ones to spoil the realization of these hopes. If we can help our team to win by being at the game and rooting for it, then the whole university body ought to be packed into the armory. At least enough to fill all the available space should be there. It is especially desirable that this game yield good financial results, as our athletic board has a debt on hand that it would be pleasant to see diminished. And in order that all of us may have food for reflection, it would not be a bad idea for as many as possible to go to chapel and imbibe some enthusiasm and transmit it to others.

Prof. Dann at Chapel.

Professor Dann gave a stereopticon lecture at chapel yesterday morning on Rome and Italy. The lecture was well illustrated and handled in an interesting manner. Much valuable instruction was given to those present on the life and customs of the historic city and her ancient people, so that from the excellent views and the clear demonstration the audience could appreciate the Roman antique.
