Editorial Remarks

Even students sometimes run counter to the labor unions, though at the time they may not be aware of the fact. Recently the students at California sought to do their institution a service by turning out and digging ditches and raising paths on the campus. Thereby they saved their University the sum of $1,500 and had a rattling fine time into the bargain. But there now comes an aftermath, in the shape of a protest from angry unionists who did not approve of the students' action in invading their chosen field of labor. They allege that the California boys showed themselves unfair by doing work that should have gone to the union.

Since California is a state university, the labor unions are in general quite badly exercised over the matter, and their newspapers have begun to interest themselves in the controversy. These declare that unless the labor unions are allowed to do such work, trouble will be raised by those paying taxes for the support of the University. They declare that they are willing to do their share in supporting the University, provided that it respects their rights as corporations are wont to do. They say that in doing what they do for the University, they have a right to expect in return whatever legitimate work is done for it in their line. The explanation is made that there was no money available for campus improvement, and in view of the fact that much needed improvements had to be made, the students for want of better means, did the work themselves. They preferred not to ask for an appropriation, as it is not likely that any could be granted, at least immediately. Under such circumstances, their actions certainly seem reasonable, in spite of the protests raised.

Conditions are fair for the closing of an arrangement with Iowa for debate, and in light of present prospects Nebraska will have a chance to get acquainted with her eastern neighbor in forensics. Iowa has already debated Minnesota this year, and had arrangements partly made with Wisconsin. But for reasons not exactly stated Wisconsin decided not to debate, and thus Iowa lost an important date. Like ourselves Iowa was given reason to believe that negotiations for debate could be closed with Wisconsin, but she was disappointed after fully expecting that a contest would take place. A debate with Iowa will probably crowd matters for us, but it will give our men a chance against strong opponents—a thing that they always desire. Never having met Iowa we have had no opportunity to become personally acquainted with her strength in debate, but suffice it to say she always shows up strong.

Fifteen Etamine and Voile Suits at Half Their Regular Price.

THIS MORNING we placed on sale 15 high-class Etamine and Voile Suits, every one possessing an individuality all its own and every one a Parisian design, at just one-half their regular price. The suits come in champagne, pearl gray, brown, heliotrope, blue and in black. These beautiful suits were used by the manufacturer as samples. We were fortunate enough to secure them. Because they were samples, we bought them at a very low figure, since the manufacturer always sells these suits, which are in assorted sizes, at an under-price. This is an opportunity to secure a rich new costume for Easter that few women would miss.

Forestry is rapidly becoming an important branch in American universities at the present time, and it is opening up a new and extensive field to students who care to take advantage of the opportunity offered. The setting out of forest trees in our own state and in other parts of the west will create a demand for men skilled in the work, and those who have had a college training in the work ought to find a good opening. Already a call has come from the Philippines emphasizing the need of foresters there. The salaries range from $1200 to $2400 per year. Actual and necessary travelling expenses are allowed and in addition a dollar a day for subsistence. Foresters in the Philippines have found the work very attractive and the conditions suitable. The laws protect the Philippine timber lands (more than 1,000,000 acres) from speculators.

The girls' basket ball team will be busily engaged this evening in proving its worth against some of our city teams. In view of the closing of their season here University people should be interested in the tournament and be present in good numbers to encourage their team to victory over its opponents. The girls have attained a high proficiency in the game and play it for all there is in it. Their good work should be appreciated, and the proper recognition shown in the way of substantial support. The men's team has ceased activity for the season and they certainly furnish a very good substitute in putting up a game full of vigor and interest.
