Campus Gleanings.

During the several holidays the past week the botanical laboratories have been open for the benefit of those who wish to close up their work. It has been announced that every student is now at liberty to finish up his laboratory work as soon as he can do so. This will accommodate the boys who go to camp.

A couple of mornings ago Professor Bessey gave the class in general botany a talk on future work in botany. He suggested certain courses as the best for particular cases, and asked all who were in doubt to consult the head of the department before registering. He made some suggestions for those who are intending to engage in teaching.

Kappa Alpha Theta initiated the new barn at the state farm Saturday evening with a barn dance. Everything was in keeping with the surroundings, the musicians playing the old-fashioned country music, the programs being of brown heavy paper, and refreshments being served from wooden buckets via the dipper route. The dance, so thoroughly informal, was enjoyed greatly by all. Several out of town people were guests of the Thetas for the evening.

A POPULAR HOTEL

Why the Students Have Come to Favor the Lindell.

In reviewing the list of University society functions held during the past year, it is interesting to note how many of these have been held at the Lindell. And one is also obliged to note the general satisfaction expressed in the service performed and the accommodation shown. Fraternity banquets, the Cornhusker banquet and the banquet given to the baseball team, have been held at the Lindell this year, and were made highly successful events by the superior facilities and high grade service furnished.

The Lindell has become popular with the students because it has learned and taken painstaking efforts to meet their wants in the best way possible. While students as a rule are not particular, yet they have their tastes, and it is no wonder that they feel pleased when these are gratified. The Lindell management has been liberal with them in their functions, going to the limit to please and accommodate them.

Concerning the banquet given to the baseball men, one of the players said: "The service was simply elegant. It couldn't have been better. Whatever a fellow most cared for was right at hand, and everything was so fine that when I reached by limit, I just had to shut my eyes to keep out the sight."

While this may be a crude way of expressing an opinion, it means a great deal. It was the unanimous sentiment of the party expressed by one man, and the genuineness of the spirit in which it was said could not be doubted. When the students themselves are effusive in speaking the way they fared it is evident that special pains were taken to accommodate them. The Lindell is high class in all respects, and when an extra effort is made superb results are shown. Students are naturally attracted to its Cafe, for having gone once they feel inclined to go again, which is indeed a good proof of the high satisfaction given. The Lindell stands high in the opinion of the students, and has certainly come to be a favorite with them.
