The department of botany received a collection of seaweeds a couple of days ago for addition to the University herbarium. With the additions made this year it is estimated that the number of plants in the herbarium now considerably exceeds one hundred thousand.

Invitations to be present at the installation of Dr. Albert B. Storms as president of Ames College, Ames, Ia., on the 6th of June, have come to many members of the faculty. Dr. Storms will be remembered by some of the students as the man who gave the very pleasant and instructive address a few weeks ago when the School of Agriculture boys were graduated.

Invitations have been extended to several of the scientific professors to be present at the opening exercises of the Carnegie station of experimental evolution on June 11th at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, N. Y. The botanists in particular are much interested in this meeting, since Dr. Hugo de Vries, of Amsterdam, Holland, one of the greatest of living botanists, is to deliver the inaugural address.
