Editorial Remarks

Most of those things mentioned in the Minnesota Daily's account of the Colorado game we already know, viz., that Nebraska played a good game, that the high altitude was disastrous, etc., but even the fastest kind of football will not avail Minnesota on October 29th. Nebraska is not very apt to become overconfident, and knows full well that the team which Minnesota will place against her will be in every way worthy of her metal. But the rooting suggestions which are being made in no doubtful language to the Gopher rooters are not out of place repeated to the rooters here. It is not known yet what rates, if any, will be given for the trip to Minnesota, and perhaps many of the rooters will not see the game. But every night at practice the bleachers can be filled, and yells for the scrubs and varsity should be very much in evidence from now on. The Minnesota game is two weeks distant, and in the meantime we have a tough proposition on our hands next Saturday in the shape of Knox. It is up to every man in school to come out on the field, if even for only ten minutes, let out a few yells of encouragement, and thus show his loyalty to the "best team Nebraska has ever had." Minnesota evidently considers the Nebraska game her biggest one this year. It is certainly our biggest one very near at hand, and if a crowd does not go to Minnesota to be with the team in person, yet the spirit expressed a la cheers from the bleachers every evening will go a long way to bring victory to the scarlet and cream again. Come out.

"Nebraska is going to fight harder after her recent defeat, and Minnesota knows it. Perhaps the Cornhuskers will win. But they won't if we GET OUT AND ROOT!"

So says The Minnesota Daily.

The Nebraskan desires to amend this. It should read as follows:

"Nebraska is going to fight harder after her recent defeat, and Minnesota knows it. Perhaps the Cornhuskers will win. They surely will, if we GET OUT AND ROOT!"

Alumni

A recent letter to the Nebraskan from E. R. Buckner, '04, who is now at Harvard University, gives the names of the following old Nebraska men, who are now at Harvard:

C. M. Story, '99.
Ira Ryner, '04.
E. R. Buckner, '04.
E. F. Myers, '04.
A. I. Myers, '04.
Walter Hiltner, '03.
O. A. Mather, ex-'05.
G. M. Peters, '03.
Walter Romigh, '03.
A. S. Pearse, '00.

This is by far the most ever at Harvard at any one time from Nebraska, and they are distributed as follows: Hiltner, Harvard Medical; Mather, Harvard College; Pearse, Harvard Graduate School. All the rest are laws.

A friend has handed us the following letter from Edwin F. Myers, '04, one of the above:

My Dear —: Nebraska seems to be starting out right in several ways this year. I understand they have a good scrub coach. My heart is with Nebraska's football team, but none the less with her Y. M. C. A. and temple fund. I guess they do not know Nebraska is on the map here, at any rate their Sunday papers do not say anything about her football prospects. I hope they have to after the Minnesota game.

You no doubt have heard a great deal about the cold and heartless way the eastern men treat a stranger. Well, just mark that down as the biggest prevarication ever. I have not seen a single snob yet though I suppose there are a few here, and the men are far more ready to make friends than Nebraska. I have seen at least a thousand men at Nebraska who put on more airs than Vanderbilt of New York city does here.

I ran across that Michigan salt case in contracts today, the first duplication I have struck in cases. The professor, Wyman, explained it differently from Robbins, and Robbie is good in contracts, too.

Now, do not think I am sore on Nebraska. I am just telling you that there is a good school and some fine fellows down here.

Give my very kindest regards to Morris and tell him that I give the Nebraska yell after getting the report of each game.

When you have nothing else to do write me a letter. Sincerely,
EDWIN F. MYERS.

Rev. Francis W. Russell, '90, called on the older professors on Thursday. He is pastor of the Second Presbyterian church in St. Louis. While in the university he gave a good deal of attention to botany and geology, and on graduation received the degree of bachelor of science.

Some very interesting weeds are now coming in to the department of botany from the alfalfa fields. A few days ago one was identified which had never been recorded as growing in America, and a day or two later another stranger was sent in. These weeds have been brought in with the alfalfa seed from southern Europe.

Dean G. N. Porter, of the English department at the Peru State Normal, who is a former graduate of the university, is visiting friends in the city and meeting old acquaintances around the college.
