Editorial Remarks

The college paper is an institution that deserves to be supported as much as any other college institution and it may not be amiss to call the attention of the students to a few things they might do to help the paper along. Everyone admits that a college daily is a great help to a college community, and on the whole, students of the university support the Nebraskan in good shape. We have no complaint to make about subscriptions, except that the young ladies do not do their share in this way. There is not the slightest doubt that every student reads the daily, whether he subscribes or not, and even those who read the paper over their neighbor's shoulder, can do their share toward tioned in regard to them you will not have to profess ignorance.

The Lincoln merchants are advertising to do business, and unless they see that the same ads are doing good they will cease to advertise and without advertising, the paper cannot exist.

This does not apply to the Nebraskan alone, but to all college publications and enterprises, such as the Y. M. C. A. hand book, the Senior and Junior Annual the football and baseball and other programs. All these are college enterprises and deserve and expect to be supported by the students. The merchants who put up their money in this way to help along the college enterprises are "good Indians" and deserve to be patronized by the student body, in preference to the merchants who are "tight" and who never show their appreciation in this manner. It is easy to single them out. Glance through the Nebraskan business directory and you will see a class of business men who have their shoulder to the wheel and are ready to support not only the Nebraskan, but all enterprises connected with the university.

In honor of the visiting guests, a number of "fudge parties" and informals are planned for Friday evening. It is even whispered that some of the girls are planning an amateur theatrical, but just when it will take place, cannot be ascertained.

There was a large theater party on Monday evening to see the "Eternal City." Those in the party were Misses Margery Richards, Edith Atherton, Mabel Arnold, Nell White, Martha Douglas, Lela McKnight, Furlong, helping the paper along without costing them one cent.

Recently a merchant advertised to sell goods, used by the students, at what we know to be less than cost, and, although many of the students patronized the sale, not one of them had spirit enough to mention the advertisement to him, and even when question by the same merchant in regard to the same, some of them professed ignorance of the entire affair.

Another merchant advertised some months back to give away absolutely free to all students who called for them, a handsome souvenir. The souvenirs were good ones and worth from 20 to 25 cents apiece, and even this did not seem to catch the students' eye, for very few called for them. Why not help the paper along and notice the ads, so that when ques-
