ATTEND ART EXHIBIT

Chancellor Andrews Advises Stu- dents to Attend the Exhibit.

Convocation period yesterday was taken up by Dr. Andrews, who made some general remarks on the importance of art and concluded by calling particular attention to the present exhibit in the art room in the library building. The chancellor opened his talk by a prelude in which he took occasion to warn the men of getting into mischief now that their spare time is not taken up by athletics and field sports. He exhorted all to take no part in anything rude, or that tended to work injury to the well being of the University, but rather to frown upon anything of the sort that came up.

Turning to his main topic, the chan- cellor said in effect:

"I hope that as many as can will attend the exhibit. Why do University people and those connected with the exhibit, exhort us to attend every year the exhibit comes around? It is be- cause the net outcome is greater. In the advent of the Christian religion the church went in to beat down the so-called pagan art. We are heirs of that Christian civilization. In those days every effort to create anything of beau- ty was looked upon as a sacrilege. Af- ter a while, however, the spirit of art established itself in the church, but not without difficulty. Calvin, who was so influential in the church, had no desire for art, and many of us who are connected with his branch of the church, have still a bit of dread for art. But to read a work of art is a beautiful accomplishment, as is also the ability to read instantly an archi- tect's plan. Our education is often la- pidated when speaking from an intellec- tual point of view. Our sensibility needs careful and systematic cultiva- tion, and an acquaintance with art is the most effectual. There are danger- ous lines along which the sensibilities may be cultivated, but it is not so with art, where all good morality and religion will be stimulated. Art is also an immense help to understandings of history, which is past religion, art, philosophy and economy. In the work of Michael Angelo is to be found the best comment on the Old Testament. The old idea of King David was a tall, stocky, too slender, for instance, to make a good center rush, but Michael Angelo's conception was vastly differ- ent. He knew the Bible exactly, and gave us models as they really were, which if we looked closely, are borne out by the Scriptures. David went so far as to try on Saul's armor, which he laid aside, not because it was too large, but because he wasn't used to wearing armor and said: 'I cast aside all defensive weapons and will employ only offensive,' and this we find was correctly interpreted by Michael An- gelo."

Engineering Notes.

The president of the Engineering So- cety spent a part of his holidays in Pawnee City.

Professor Evans has not as yet arrived on the campus from his holi- day vacation.

One of the new mechanical stokers is now in operation and the others will be ready shortly.

Mr. Bliz has wired up the new pho- tometer and the lighting class will soon try its merits.

Mr. Moore has photographs taken of all the electrical appliances in the de- partment. The photographs are to go to the St. Louis exposition.

Dr. Dean is putting the new Ruhle oil machine in shape for a series of oil tests that will soon be run.

Messrs. Holman and Brich have been working on their theses during the first week of vacation. Mr. Brich has finished all the experimental parts.

Professor Richards has given each member of the class in pumping ma- chinery some section of the subject, which is to be thoroughly studied up in the library and then reported upon for the benefit of the rest of the class.

The Historical Society has at last located a son of Ex-Governor Izzard of this state, and expects to be able to bridge the gap in its record of state history, which had resulted in a total lack of information as to that gentle- man's administration. Governor Izzard was formerly state marshal of Arkan- sas and was appointed from that position to the governorship of Nebraska in 1870.

Captain Chase reports that delin- quencies in the basketball Monday night were much more numerous than had been anticipated. Drill last evening was held on the campus.

One of the nice things in men's wear is a Manhattan shirt. We are selling the $1.75 shirt at $1.13; the $2.00 grade at $1.33. Same kind of discount on our $2.50 and $3.00 ones, says Paine, of Paine's Clothing Store.
