Editorial Remarks

The following is taken from the Kansan, the official paper of the University of Kansas:

"Prominent students have been very active during the past week working up sentiment in favor of resuming athletic relations with Nebraska if any sort of terms honorable to Kansas can be arranged with the cornhusker association. A petition has been circulated this week which will be presented to the athletic board, urging it to take steps in this direction.

"Nebraska and Kansas are logical opponents, and there is no reason for cherishing petty spite and declaring everything off.

"We ought to have debate as well as athletic contests with Nebraska, and its up to Kansas to make the overtures."

On the whole we agree with the little feeling either pro or con manifest. There is an indifference, sort of "don't care" spirit. When Kansas saw fit to sever relations with Nebraska we were somewhat surprised, of course, but the feeling of surprise soon died out, and that succeeding, and still prevalent, is one of indifference not absolute but one of "we don't much care."

The debaters have been run through the "preliminary" sieve and the men to compose the squad sifted out, and the machine with its characteristic promptness is already at work. The test to which the Nebraska system will be put this year will be the severest yet brought to bear upon it. Besides the difficulties of the question to be debated a new and worthy opponent has been taken on, to defeat which will require the utmost nicety of action on the part of the machine. The preliminary trials convinced the men participating that they had not quite mastered the question and that an enormous amount of hard work must be done to bring forensic honors again to Nebraska. But obstacles, which seemed insurmountable, have been overcome in the past, and we feel that history will repeat itself.

Candidates for the baseball team will meet Monday. Owing to last of facilities Nebraska is later than most of the other Universities in getting baseball practice started, and hard, faithful work will have to follow to develop a winning team such as we have had for the last three years. There ought to be a hundred men report to Captain Bender Monday. Only by every man at all capable of playing the game reporting for practice and then practicing, can Nebraska go through the baseball season with success.

PAN-HELLENIC ELEVEN.

"In recent excavations was found a special football edition of "Semi-Centennial Petrograph," of which Homer was editor-in-chief. The paragraph of most interest is reproduced below which deals with the famous Pan Homeric football team:

The lineup is as follows:
R. E.—Pollux; ht. 8-ft.; wt. 370 lbs.
R. T.—Hercules, ht. 12-7; wt. 835½ pounds.
R. G.—Atlas, ht. 1ml.-2-furlongs; wt. 12 tons-4½ stone.

For Your Spring Shirt Waist Suit
A Very Correct Material Is Mohair.....

Colored Mohairs and Sicilians are presented for the season in new and unexpected variety. They are to be extremely popular not only for street and travel, but for house and dressy wear and are appearing both in the daintiest and darkest shades. Even their lustre is varied from the hard and bright to the silver and softly lighted.

The new weaves include plain mohairs, changeable effects, phantom checks and plaids (yarns of the same color woven into checks which come and go with changing lights), shepherd checks, blue and green checks, melange or mixed mohairs, printed warps, videscent or illuminated grounds, mannish and tailor-made effects. Nearly every popular weave is to be found in this material.

We have on hand 250 new pieces ranging in price all the way from 45c to $2.00 a yard.

the required five yards. At left guard Antasen was easily superior to anyone whom he encountered during the season. He gained strength at each down, and was, all in all, a most formidable antagonist.

The tackle positions have been admirably filled by Hercules and Ajax. The former has been criticised on account of undue roughness and his amateur standing was once questioned, but on the whole he put up a steady, reliable article of football. Ajax, his team mate, while not as experienced as Hercules, was rarely outplayed, and in all of his contests showed remarkable running powers.

On the end Pollux showed special ability in boxing the opposing tackle, while his brother, Castor, on the other wing, was equally clever in getting down the field after the kickoff.

As quarter-back and captain Ulysses was the mainstay of the team. His clever headwork, general all round ability as a tactician, and power of running the team, have all marked him as one of the foremost quarter back Hellas has ever produced.

Behind the line, Achilles was easily the foremost half-back of the year. His dashing end runs have rarely been equalled on the Olympian field, and he seems to have been absolutely unbreakable. Hector, his runningmate is second only to Achilles. In his plunging buck he has been unsurpassed, while by getting the opposite end out of the way he has aided markedly in the long runs for which Achilles has been so famous. Jason, at full back, has been a hard worker and a steady ground-gainer, and merits much praise for the faithfulness with which he attends practice.

Among the substitutes, the following men deserve commendation: Perseus, Agamemnon, Theseus, Bacchus, Patroclus, Dromedes, Aeneas and Baechen. The last named played full on the scrubs, but lost his position owing to poor condition.

Mars has proved an excellent trainer and has instilled a great amount of fight into the game. Nestor, as manager, has kept everything in smooth running order, and will, without doubt, re-elected to the position for the next season. Poseidon, as water boy, Aeohn, as yell master, and Orpheus as band master, have all contributed largely to the great success of the team. Baron Munchausen served as official reporter, and it is through his kind offices that this writeup is obtained.—Beloit Round Table.

On Friday Professor Bessey gave a short lecture to his class in general botany on "How to Pass an Examination." It was based upon his study of the papers handed in by the class at the close of the first semester.

feeling expressed. Nebraska and Kansas are logical opponents and up to the last year or two the rivalry between the two schools, while intense at times, was of a healthful sort. Nebraska usually had the better of the contests with Kansas, but the Jayhawkers usually made us "go some." And it is certainly up to Kansas to make overtures, to mend the rent she herself has made, if she can. The break came after Nebraska had acceded to every demand made by Kansas in the eligibility question last year, and Kansas is right in taking the view that she must make the advances. As to the "petty spite," there is little or none of this feeling at Nebraska. On the other hand there is Among the candidates for the pivotal position, Potter Cyclops was unanimously chosen because of his remarkable ability to keep his eye on the ball. He was injured early in the season by his own quarter-back, his eye being temporarily disabled, but he succeeded in getting hard into the game before the end of the season.

Atlas, at right guard, though a trifle cumbersome, displayed remarkable ability in carrying the ball. He seldom failed, when called upon to make
