The class in Economic Entomology left early this morning for Ashland to enjoy a day of field work. Professor Bruner, and H. W. Swenk, assistant in the Department, accompanied the class. The party took the train to Ashland and then walked to Southbend, where the train will be taken for Lincoln. There are six students in the class. The object of the work done by the class is to prepare them for positions under the United States Department of Agriculture and the day of practical field work will prove very valuable to them.
