HIDDEN HISTORIES.

Derisive remarks as to the cramped condition of our campus have furnished the critically inclined visitors and the pessimistic natives with a topic of conversation for many years.

These remarks have not been without point, for it must be admitted that the Nebraska campus is not enormous. A large proportion of the available space is occupied by buildings, and the opportunities for viewing Nature in her own environment are reduced to a minimum.

The prospects for an immediate change for the better are not startling; the best alternative, then, seems to lie in a full appreciation of the blessings that are crowded upon us. The very insignificance of the campus has led the students to pass their college days wholly oblivious of the time and painstaking care that has been spent in providing the grounds with its attractions.

These attractions are not confined to the fountain, the lamp post, and the circular stone bench, but extend to the Linden, the Ivy on the Library, and the huge boulder, whose history appears in today's issue. Investigation will prove that most all of these, and many other adornments are the possessors of a past, which is worth looking into.

It will be our aim to bring to light some of these hidden histories (or mysteries), and thereby to stimulate an interest in them which will help to deaden the sting of a diminutive campus, and enable the Nebraska student to "tell the visitor a few things."

It is a strange but universal truth that the school honor which the "other" fellow or bunch grabs is either "not worth while" or obtained by "graft."

GENERAL RALLY THURSDAY.

Quartette and Chorus Will Participate in Program.

Preparations are under way for the all-university rally to be held Thursday morning. A number of speakers have been secured and the Glee Club quartette and the chorus will render selections. The rally is not to be held in the interests of any single organization or phase of activity, but will be devoted to arousing enthusiasm along general lines.

"DIPLOMAT" REHEARSAL.

The entire cast of "The Diplomat," including the chorus, will rehearse in the study room of the Temple this evening at 7:00 o'clock sharp. For the sake of secrecy, none of the music has been written, so that it will be necessary for every member of the cast to learn each song.

For your orchestra call O. L. Jones. Auto L-8605.

FARM NOTES.

State Senator Ollis, of Ord, is visiting his daughter, Miss Ruth Ollis.

Misses Mary Pallas and Rose Caha, of Wahoo, are visiting Miss Caroline Caha at the H. E. hall.

Mrs. Nella Stoddard, of Auburn, is visiting her daughter, Miss Lois Stoddard, at the H. E. hall.

Miss Morris, territorial secretary for the Y. W. C. A., has been a weekend guest at the H. E. hall.

The seniors at the Farm will give a party in the assembly room of Agricultural Hall April 13, and a dance at the Temple, April 20.

An Easter vesper service was held at the Farm Sunday under the auspices of the Christian associations. Miss Morris, territorial secretary, delivered an Easter message.

About twenty of the senior boys in the soils class took a soil survey Thursday afternoon. Leaving Lincoln about 2:30 o'clock, they were taken to the cave south of the city and there studied the formation of the different layers of soil forming rocks.

Miss Helen Westover is visiting at the Alpha O house for a few days. Some of the girls who came to Lincoln for the Alpha O formal were compelled to remain until last Friday, owing to the floods.
