THE GREATEST NEED?

That our efforts are not absolutely fruitless is shown by several valuable suggestions which we have recently received from interested students and alumni. So far only two names have been submitted for the athletic field, "Best" field, in recognition of our venerable trainer, "Jack," and "Corn" field, as appropos of our chief agricultural interest.

The following are a few suggestions received in an anonymous letter:

1. Removal of the University to the Farm?
 2. Dormitory system?
 3. Good smoking room?
 4. One place to hold all hops, etc.?
 5. Nebraska union?
 6. Increased incidental fee to admit every student to all athletic events and enable him to take the publications?
 7. Dandelion Day?
 8. Less knockers around school?
 9. Vacation?
 10. Larger appropriations from the legislature?
- "Not a Knocker, But a Suggester," is the signature.

UNIVERSITY POLITICIANS.

The students of the University are in the toils of political campaigning; the male students who have reached the exalted age of twenty-one are industriously discussing the presidential possibilities, those who are still "mere youths" are profling financially by distributing posters, handbills and cards, while the crowds content themselves with assuming a knowing air and boosting for the preference of their paternal sires.

Considering the question from a serious point of view, however, the political influence of the student body is not to be laughed at. Such has been the experience of the city politicians in their former campaigns, and although the effect of the vote will not be materially felt in the presidential race, still it serves as an indication of the preference of the future.

Many of the youthful voters will cast their first ballot today in the primaries; some will be guided by political insight, some by personal preference and some (few, we hope) by chance.

PASSING UP THE CHANCE.

There's a lot of things that should be done before this week has passed:

for the days are slipping one by one, and the time for work is going fast. There is a theme we ought to write, or, for some perhaps, a legal case or two—now the time is at its height and to quit right here'll never do. Why should we wait for Friday when a former day is just as fine to do the things along the way that happen to follow along our line? Yes, we do it, every day and every week; and oft when Friday comes along we'd rather hear some big man speak, and so we let our duties go—all wrong. So let us learn here while we can; for when we pass the chance today, that chance goes on to another land, and ne'er again will come our way.

STUDENTS HEAR THE COLONEL

Dr. Maxey Forced to Respond to Repeated Calls.

Students from the University were greatly in evidence at the Roosevelt meeting at the Auditorium last night and before the appearance of the colonel a number of varsity cheers were given. Dr. Maxey, who occupied a seat on the platform, was compelled to respond to repeated calls and arose and bowed to the crowd, at the same time giving utterance to one of his justly celebrated witticisms.
