CARNIVAL REMOVED.

Students, faculty, the public, and all will be relieved to learn that the local authorities have decided to remove the Eagles' carnival from its present position within the shadows of the University. Student sentiment on vital issues is not a difficult thing to arouse, and it is fortunate that prompt measures were taken to relieve what otherwise might have developed into an unpleasant situation.

In the light of the present arrangements it does not seem to be the province of The Nebraskan to go into or elude to the ethics of the present controversy. We can simply say that it is gratifying to see a considerable number of the student body take the stand they have. To a great extent the interests of the University were at stake, and to see the students rise en masse, so to speak, declaring themselves against any institution that appeared to impair the efficiency of the University, is to the highest degree edifying.

Of course the student in no case could have afforded to have been squeamish in this matter. If it was corrupting, demoralizing or wasting one's time to attend the carnival, a very efficient and peaceful remedy would have been to remain away. But objections were found other than these, and objections which boycotting could not remove. The point is, the carnival was a nuisance to those who never cared to enter its gates, and who would have fled from the din and noise if to do so would not have routed them from their own rooms. That the students should have resented such a condition is natural and commendable. Hence the effort to remove the cause and thereby prevent any possible trouble.

The Nebraskan is grateful to the city authorities for taking the action that they have. Regardless of the question of public policy, we feel that their action was phased on a desire to satisfy a reasonable demand from the students, and that in so doing they have impressed upon the minds of the student body the fact that to all students and purposes Lincoln is a desirable and satisfactory seat for a great educational institution.

In all, this little episode represents the effectiveness of student consciousness when properly aroused, directed and executed.

The actuality of conditions provided the proper stimulus for action, the activity and suggestion of Dr. Condra, the Y. M. C. A., and other pointed the way out of the difficulty, and the promptness and effectiveness of the work of the Innocents, together with the co-operation of the city authorities, brought the desired consummation.

This will close the matter very satisfactorily as far as the University is concerned, and no trouble of this sort is expected in the future, now that the attitude of the students on such matters is clearly understood.
