THE WEEK'S REVIEW.

Being a Brief Resume of Events of the Past Week, as Gleaned from Nebraskan Files.

Nebraska suffers defeat from the hands of the Minnesota Gophers by the score of 13 to 0. The band accompanies the team through the efforts of the band, the students, the merchants, and the Athletic Board. The Nebraskan gets out an extra edition giving a detailed account of the game as telegraphed by its own correspondent on the field. Stiehm spends the week in teaching his men some of the fundamentals of the game, a portion of the practice being behind closed doors.

The Palladians publish a report of their scholarship record which places them among the worthy organizations of the University.

The 1912 clock, which was presented to the University by last year's graduating class, arrives. Work commences on its installation over the library entrance.

A new engineering society is organized, being incorporated by prominent engineers of the city and the University.

Initial plans for the Olympics are announced. Chief interest centers in the big class contest or canvas pull.

"Cut" lets loose with a little wit on the return of the wanderers from Saintapolis.

The Y. W. C. A. announces that it will give a pageant October 27 in honor of the approaching visit of Miss King, daughter of the president of Peking University.

Clark Dickenson announces his junior class appointments and holds a class meeting at the same time. Reed Dawson is slated to "run" the junior prom.

The first convocation at the School of Agriculture is held, at which Principal Bradford makes the opening address.

Dr. Maxey gives a comprehensive lecture on the Balkan situation, and declares that the present struggle means that either the Turks or the Balkans must evacuate for all time.

The Kosmet Klub holds its first meeting of the year and starts in motion arrangements for its annual performance.

The Spikes seek to perpetuate themselves by initiating another batch of freshmen.

The Nebraskan receives dispatches from Missouri and Kansas depicting the condition of their respective varsity teams.

A periodical club is formed by members of the faculty and a few graduate students.

Nebraska athletic management comes in for criticism from the pen of Clyde Elliott, special sporting writer for the Omaha Bee, and a former student of the University. The Nebraskan and the local papers suggest that Elliott's criticisms are tinged by hidden grievances.

Williams and Meyer reached the finals in the fall tennis tournament.

Seven students are elected to membership in the University Dramatic Club.

Plans for a home-coming day are pushed by the athletic management. It will be held on the day of the Kansas game, November 16.

W. E. Kavan writes the Nebraskan on the subject of University extension and urges that all legislative candidates be requested to commit themselves on the subject of University extension.

TASK BEFORE STIEHM

Jayhawker squad are preparing to slip it over the Cornhuskers this year, and have already begun to work especially on plays for the Nebraska machine.

It can easily be seen that great things might happen in the Valley if Kansas or Missouri should slip it over the Cornhuskers in their games, or if Drake should defeat Ames next month near the close of the season. Washington would be the shining light in the Valley then, unless they suffered an overwhelming defeat before then. Things look like a jumbled-up mess at the present time, and it is due no doubt to the fact that none of the teams meet all of the other teams except Missouri. If it were arranged in all future schedules that each team meet all the other teams in the Valley this difficulty might be overcome, but as it stands now a great many pencils will be worn out doing a bunch of comparative figuring.

READY FOR ADRIAN

bla. It is up to the Cornhuskers to defeat the Missourians by a larger score than the Ames Aggies, so Stiehm will take no chances with his men.
