

The Daily Nebraskan

Vol. XII. No. 48

UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA, LINCOLN, SATURDAY, NOV. 23, 1912

Price 5 Cents

OUT FOR VICTORY

OWEN BRINGS BUNCH OF HUSKIES WHO LOOK STRONG.

HOWARD TO PLAY PURDY'S HALF

Reeds and Courtright, Sooner Stars. Both in Pink of Fighting Shape—Drop Kicks Most Feared Factor.

The Cornhuskers appear the last time this season when they meet the strong Oklahoma team this afternoon on Nebraska field. After winning all of the Conference games and losing only one game, and that to Minnesota, the Scarlet and Cream warriors are not in very good trim for the final battle, but nevertheless hope to win. Unless they display a better brand of the pastime than they did last week against Kansas the Sooners will probably go home with the bacon. The practice this last week has been something of the kind displayed last year the week before the Michigan game, which the Huskers virtually won. If the Huskers can come back today there will be a great game.

One encouraging factor of the Cornhusker team is the fine showing made by Howard this last week at halfback. Purdy is still limping, but will be able to make a creditable showing against the Sooners. The eligibility rules will cost Nebraska at least one man and possibly another. But in both cases there will be little commotion, for their places will be filled by extra good subs.

The team Bennie Owen brought to Lincoln yesterday is the best that his school has turned out in past years. Last year the team went through the season without a defeat and returned eight letter men this year.

The Sooners lost to Missouri this year on account of a little hard luck. With Courtright out of the lineup and Reeds almost helpless without his interference, they were unable to gain consistently against the Tigers. Courtright, too, was missed when it came to kicking from placement.

Oklahoma depends upon Reeds' kicking to carry the ball down the field, and when this is accomplished Courtright drops back and neatly places a neat place kick between the bars. Reeds' kicks average very close to the 50- and 60-yard mark, and if he is right today—some very beautiful spirals will be seen.

OKLAHOMA. NEBRASKA.
G. Clark (Capt.) R. E. Mastin
Meacham R. T. Harmon
Beury R. G. Meyer
Spears C. Allan
Brown L. G. Pearson
W. Clark L. T. Swanson
Holland L. E. Howard
Ambrister Q. B. Potter
Courtright L. H. Purdy
Lowry R. H. Frank (Capt.)
Reeds F. B. Halligan
Officials—Referee, Grover, ex-Washington; umpire, Dudley; head linesman, Irwin.—Jimmy.

Leading Characters in Dramatic Club

BYRNE MARCELLUS.

KATHERINE YATES.

CLUB ROUSING MUCH INTEREST

Twenty-one Students of Advanced German Contested for Admittance to German Dram Club Fri. Eve.

The final tryouts for the German Dramatic Club were held Friday night in the music hall of the Temple. The contestants were all students taking advanced German or students of German parentage, and therefore the work was exceptionally well done. There was a great deal of enthusiasm shown, and of the twenty-one contestants many showed exceptional histrionic ability.

The play selected for the tryouts was Freytag's "Die Journalisten," chosen for the reason that this play is to be presented by the club on March 7. This selection, therefore, gives the contestants a decided advantage inasmuch as they tried out in the play in which some of them will perhaps take part. Further tryouts in the play of the new and old members will be held soon in order to determine who shall take the parts.

Miss Heppner, who supervises the club, is very much gratified at the interest shown by the students of German in the club. It has only been in existence a short time, and the interest and enthusiasm shown seem to indicate that more of the students of Nebraska are taking advanced work in German. For this reason she desires that the names of the selected contestants be not published until later, as she wishes to see all of the contestants personally to encourage those who were unfortunate to "keep up the good work." The names of the new members will be published as soon as their identity is disclosed.—C. N. B.

Sophomore Football Practice.

Sophomore football practice Monday morning at 11 o'clock at the gymnasium.—Ed Pettis, manager.

BLUEPRINT ARTICLES READY

"Biggest and Best" Issue Goes to Press Soon—Tag Campaign for Subscriptions Inaugurated Dec. 2.

The greater part of the material for the first number of the Blueprint, the semi-annual publication of the Engineering Society, has been assembled. Three of the articles which will be of especial interest are the thesis of Pearse and Rohwer on "Continuous Girder Design," "The Birdwood Power Project" by Hoge, and "Patent Office Drawings" by C. A. Bennett. It seems that the purpose of the editors to make this the best issue yet published will be realized. Business Manager Krause emphatically states that the first issue will be out by January 15.

It is the view of the engineering faculty that not enough of the students are subscribers. So, with the intention of getting the subscription of every engineering student, a tag campaign will be started Monday, December 2, under the direction of G. A. Walker. There are almost 500 engineering students in school, and every one of these will be urged to subscribe. Only 25 cents will be required as a deposit to secure the subscription. The yearly subscription price for the two numbers is $1.—Ly.

FOURTH LECTURE ON ART.

Miss Hayden Speaks in Gallery Monday Night.

The fourth informal talk on art by Miss Hayden in the art gallery Monday evening will be a continuation of "Pictorial Composition," her subject of last week. These talks are very interesting to those interested in art, and are well attended. Miss Hayden has set up a question box, and is glad to answer any questions asked her concerning art matters.—W. S.

LAWS GET RESTLESS

UNABLE TO KEEP WITHIN THE BOUNDS WITHOUT OLD DIRGE.

ATTEND CLASS GAMES IN BODY

Later Adjourn to Fake Mass-Meeting to Show Their Roughish Spirits—Remedy Needed Soon—How to Make It.

Again the inmates of the law shop show their utter incapability of restraining themselves within the bounds of that element which they profess to be the subject of their daily toil. The spirit of lawlessness among the followers of Blackstone is again finding vent in a form that though often threatened, has never ripened into a definite performance.

Seek New Fields.

Some time ago a nervous breakdown among the students of legal lore was impending by reason of the fact that the faculty denied them their customary morning dirge relating to some intention of theirs to go somewhere—to the "Hamburg Show," or something like that. Such threatened physical disability first became apparent a few days ago when one of the less-enduring ones actually fainted under the weight of his pent-up feelings. This deplorable accident was a sure indication that some immediate measures were indispensable for disposing of the unruly and heretofore confined spirit of roughness that seems to be inherent in a law student, and the whole law school, maintaining a degree of quietude that has been the subject of comment the campus over, went casting about for a new way to break into the limelight that would be worthy of one thoroughly acquainted with the nature and defects of the law. And their casting was not in vain.

Attend Class Games.

Some person with a reckless disregard of circumstances put a notice on the board in the law school stating that there was to be an interclass football game at the time of day when the inhabitants of the shop were supposed to be intent upon their recitations. The notice offered a great opportunity. The inspiration became rampant in short order and the laws marched out en masse to contribute their 10 pennies apiece to the fund for bestowing upon the interclass gridiron expects their class numerals.

Incidentally, when the professor of the 10 o'clock class entered the room he was loudly greeted by a peculiarly empty vacancy slightly rippled by distant noises from the athletic field. Consequently the interclass games were well attended.

Leave Class for Meeting.

Likewise, yesterday a professor was slightly late to class. During the interim while the students were patiently awaiting his appearance, someone suggested that he smelled a mass-meeting in the Armory. An immediate adjournment was taken to that

(Continued on Page 2.)