

THAT MYSTERIOUS APPARITION

Strangely Dressed Thing Causes Much Hubbub About Town Yesterday By Display of Summer Flannels.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN NEW WAITER

Who was the mysterious man in white? Immense crowds of unsuspecting citizens of staid old Lincoln stood aghast at the sight of the apparition which passed down Eleventh street and thence to Seventeenth on O just before noon yesterday. In a white serge suit with a spotless soft felt hat, white canvas shoes, red socks and flowing Batswing tie, it presented a picture which caused many to glance furtively at the nearest thermometer. "Land sakes, Si," one visitor to the city was heard to exclaim as the apparition made its triumphant passage, "there goes one of them actor fellows we read about."

Probably the most conspicuous point of this strange figure's appearance was the rosiness of its physiognomy, commonly known as "phys." Wearing ordinary clothes the average mortal would have taken it for Jim Thorpe or some other specimen of Earl & Wilson's brand.

After parading about town for nearly a half hour it was seen entering the Delta Delta Delta house, where a view through the window would have disclosed it waiting tables and hammering the ivories in accordance with the desires of its fair commanders. To say that it seemed perfectly at home or used to the occupation would be telling. However, the dishes having been washed, it departed none the worse for its experience and again wandered disconsolately through the city, steering clear of the campus, however. It disappeared as suddenly and silently (?) as it first came to view, and, it is said, departed a wiser, if humbler—freshman.—X.
