ABOUT REMOVAL.

The position that the Daily Nebraskan has taken in favor of the Regents' plans for the removal of the campus to the State Farm is prompted by a belief that such a move is a particularly happy one from the student point of view. As expressed in a previous editorial, we feel that the greatest handicap that the student body has to work against is a lack of unity and association. This condition is directly due to the separate existence which each student lives from the other and it would find its most conclusive remedy, we believe, in removal to the farm, where the natural conditions would favor the establishment of an essentially student community. For that reason we favor removal, and in endeavoring to represent the students, we shall continue this policy.

Unfortunately the removal question is being made the excuse for a lot of wrangling between interested parties. It is also affording the local evening yellow a chance to jibe the University and its officials with such shafts of fiction as it is able to create out of an already overworked imagination. Friends of the University need not, however, be alarmed by the foamings of a cheap newspaper, which indulges in simple personalities, veiled insinuations, and malicious fabrications in order to give effect to its stand on a public question. There are enough salient and conclusive facts involved in the University removal question to allow for a solution on its merits. We believe that such facts argue for removal and hence feel that personal-ties and side issues are to be avoided as availing nothing.

The Nebraskan recommends that the students make the acquaintance of the legislators representing their home counties, and convey to them their views anent the removal issue. We have it from several members of the assembly that the student point of view is going to have some weight in the determination of the question and if such is the case, the same should be conveyed by the students themselves. Students, therefore, should familiarize themselves with the important points involved in the present controversy, determine their position and acquaint the legislature with the same. To this end a student movement should be started and an effort made to arrive at some decision. It is a matter upon which the students should have pretty well defined views and they should accordingly be induced to express themselves.

SLANG MAY BE PUNISHED.

Wisconsin Professor Would Estimate Offensiveness by Fines.

Several folders containing lists of questions composed with the idea of making a study of judgments based upon sensibility to language were received today by Professor Edmond S. Meany, head of the history department, from Dr. Joseph Jastrow, a noted Polish scientist, now head of the department of psychology at Wisconsin.

Slang expressions, misspelled words, mispronunciations and abbreviations are drawn up in various columns and the reader is asked to write down according to the offensiveness and the expression a fine, varying from 1 cent to $1. The results are to be used in statistics to be published by Mr. Jastrow next year.

Professor Meany is distributing the pamphlets among the faculty—Wis. Daily News.
