1913 CORNHUSKER SNAP SHOT FIEND PERMITS NONE TO ESCAPE.

CARTOONIST IS ACTIVE

Sober Professors, Amorous Fussers and Sprightly Maidens Will Have Their Foibles Depicted by Merciless Artists.

Through the faithful efforts of its artist, Bob Finley, the 1913 Cornhusker is going to be a veritable labyrinth of snapshots. Prominent and dignified professors have been caught by the artist in positions that represent every possible variation from the sublime to the ridiculous. Some in the heat of florid argument, others displaying their unique personality in ordinary campus courtesies, the prominent people of the University will be variously, wily and copiously spread on the year book's ample page.

The soberest looking individual that ever gained admittance into the University conspicuously appears in the light of a chivalrous courtier immediately in front of the silo. MISS HAYDEN SPEAKS ON CARBON PRINTS

Miss Ensign And Girls Served Tea To Visitors.—American Artists Keeping Pace.

Thursday afternoon Miss Ensign assisted by several university girls served tea in the Art Hall to those who took advantage of seeing the Thistle Carbon Prints of American masterpieces exhibited there. At 4:30 Miss Hayden gave a brief discussion of the pictures and American art in general.

The pictures are obtained through the American Federation of Fine Arts which was formed for the purpose of encouraging and fostering an appreciation of the best in Art. The carbon prints are splendid reproductions of the originals, which are all by American artists, and show that the Americans are keeping pace in art as well as other lines with the work done abroad.

Harold Slater, '12, of New York City, was a campus visitor yesterday.

The Bushnell Guild wishes to announce that they have not petitioned any fraternity with the view of establishing a chapter at Nebraska. Reports to this effect are unfounded.
