

Big Banquet to be Held at Lindell Saturday Evening

The Engineers will hold their annual banquet at the Lindell Hotel Saturday evening, April 19, 1913, at 8:30. This will be the climax of Engineers' Week and every engineer should attend. The committee in charge have spared neither time nor money in making this one of the very best events that the engineers have had a chance to attend this year. All the live professors and good engineers will be there.

A plate at the banquet will be given for the best engineering yell turned in before Saturday. This is open to all.

THE ENGINEERS.

A Protest.

Oh, pity us poor engineers,
For social aids we're not;
And cannot even rest in peace
When we lie upon our cot.

The B. H. and all curves
Dance round us while we sleep;
And Logarithmic Spirals
Try to ensnare our feet.

We must lead lives like Misers grim
And hoard up only work,
And Prof. Engberg is mighty sure
To get us if we shirk.

Oh, pity us poor engineers
Tied down with ball and chain;
We're stake'd out in the wilderness
And filled cheek full of pain.

We live on horse power mostly now
With angles for descent,
And we must have hydraulics books
Though we only have one shirt.

Cotillions do not bother us
Class deficits and such;
And that is why, some others say
We don't amount to much.

But listen gentle reader:
You know we're on the square;
And when you speak of on the level
It's we, you mean, are there.

And so though we don't cut the dash
In the social life so gay,
We hope to come unto our own
In some not distant day.

SILVA.
