GIRLS' ISSUE A MARVEL

FEMININE MINDS HAVE CON-CEIVED A DAILY NEBRASKAN WHICH WILL SURPASS ALL.

DISCLOSES MANY SCANDALS

From Twenty Pages of Live Reading Much May Be Learned-The Subject of Man a Dead Issue.

The fair feminine tsudents of the University have put their pretty heads together and have decided to produce a stupendous issue of the Daily Nebraskan Friday all by themselves. This issue will be devoted to woman and her interests, and is not supposed to concern the ordinary man in the least. It is not, however, a suffragette issue and it would be wronging the co-ed journalists to consider it such.

It is to be a really truly paper just like any other one only instead of just a lot of trash that only men read it will contain fashion notes and photographs of the latest Parisian styles, roasts on the man, and what the Pi Phi said about the Alpha Chis yesterday at dinner and other lovely scandals. The foibles of the male will be well depicted and a man must be thick skinned, indeed, not to shrink from the rapier thrusts of feminine satire. (Hat pins would be better only they have quit wearing them.)

There is to be the "beautifullest" cover probably printed in colors, and twenty pages of the best reading matter ever produced in University. The girls have secured so many advertisements that they can produce the paper without additional cost and any subscriber of the Daily Nebraskan can secure a copy of the wonderful Girl's Edition by applying at Station A for it. Extra copies may be purchased at the University Book Store.

THE TEN VIRGINS

haste and studied as never before. And the foolish cried unto the wise, "Explain to us this chapter!" and "Send to us your note-books!" But the wise answered, saying, "Not so; we have no time to explain and we want to use our own note-books. Go and borrow of someone else."

And while they ran hither and thither in panicy haste, the quiz came. And they went in unto it; and the door was shut. A week after came the virgins to the professor's office, and the wise tasted the joys of the diligent, but at the foolish the professor shook his head and said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, you passed it not."

Dig, therefore, for ye know not the hour of a shot-gun quiz.

A Parable of the Average Man.

The Girly Girl, the Practical Girl and the Average Man went for a walk, and they came to a brook with stepping stones. The Practical Girl stepped out on the stones, balanced herself carefully and went across. But the Girly-Girl stood on the first stone and screamed till the average man helped her over.

They went on until they came to a low zig-zag fence. The Practical Girl laughed and climbed over. But the Girly Girl looked at her ruffly dress and pouted until the Average Man came to her rescue.

Time passed. The Average Man went away. The Practical Girl shook his hand and looked thoughtful, but the Girly Girl daubed at her blue eyes with a wisp of linen. When the Average Man came back he went straight to the Girly-Girl and asked her to marry him. And the Practical Girl put her chin in her hand-and pondered.
