Minnesota vs Nebraska

HAVE BEATEN THE SWEDES—WE CAN DO IT AGAIN.

There is a striking similarity in the two machines. It is this. Both teams are stronger offensively than defensively. The game will resolve itself into a contest of offensive tactics. Both are scoring machines which will make the game all the more interesting.

Secret Practice Yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon Coach Stiehm gave his warriors their last workout before the game. The practice was behind locked gates. Most of the time was spent in a snappy signal practice. A good deal of attention was paid to perfecting certain defensive and offensive formations. It was a tight practice and was calculated to put the varsity in the best possible condition. They needed a rest after their many hard scrimmages of last week.

Nebraska's Chances for Victory.

Nebraska's chances for victory depend largely upon their ability in solving the famous Minnesota shift. This play masses between tackle and end. Hence the brunt of the battle is very likely to rest on the tackles and ends and Nebraska's chances for the long end of the score may depend on whether or not they can stop this play.

For the last week the Freshmen, in their scrimmages against the varsity, have been using the Minnesota shift. To break it up was a pipe for the varsity. But very seldom were the neophytes able to get away with it. The Cornhuskers seem to have solved the mystery of how to stop this play. If they can stop it when played by the originators, the game is theirs.

Another chance for victory is "Bing" Mastin's trusty boot. Coach Stiehm has succeeded in keeping the fact under cover that he was practicing Mastin at drop-kicking until late this week. If the Cornhuskers came within booting distance of the Minnesota goal, Mastin will undoubtedly be called upon to boot the oval over. If Nebraska can hold the Gophers to a small score, are and unable to score themselves, "Bing" may bring victory to the Scarlet and Cream via the aerial route.

Game At 2:30.

In order that the Minnesota team may catch an early train home the game has been changed from 3:00 o'clock to 2:30 o'clock. The weather man has it that the day will be a perfect one. The field is in prime condition. Everything points to the greatest battle of the season. NEBRASKA IS GOING TO WIN.
