INDIANS ARE BAD FOES

GAME SATURDAY WITH HASKELL

REDSKINS NEAR-PROFESSIONALS

Two Carlisle Players on Team—Several Indians Played Against Nebraska Five Years Ago—Victory is Costly.

(BY H. V. HARLAN)

The game last Saturday with the Haskell Indians from Lawrence, Kas., has left an unpleasant taste in the mouths of the Cornhusker fans. The contest was an unsatisfactory one from many standpoints. Now that the immediate feeling engendered by the game has cooled off somewhat the time is opportune for a sane presentation of the facts.

Indians Are Near-Professionals.

The Indians should not be properly classed as collegians nor their teams as amateur teams. They are bound by no eligibility rules. The redskin players shift from Haskell to Carlisle and from Carlisle to Haskell. The number of years an Indian has played counts as nothing—he is used in the game as long as he makes good, be that one, two, four, five or even seven years.

In addition the Indians have nothing to do in this world except go to school at the government's expense and play football. It makes no difference to them if they are disfigured or crippled in a game for their future is amply provided for. Not so with the white man. He must keep in good physical shape or his chances in winning his way in the world after his college days are diminished. If he is crippled or disfigured he is practically out of the running.

Hence it is that the Indians play a more wicked game than their white brothers. Not caring for himself he naturally cannot understand that the white man does care, in fact, must care. To say this does not imply that the red skin excels his white brother in courage. For the whites are as courageous as any Indian that ever lived. But their courage is mixed with discretion. He must think of the morrow while the Indian does not. There lies the difference.

Since the Indians are bound by no eligibility rules, play as many years as they make good and play virtually at the government's expense they are, it not professionals, near-professionals. They should not be scheduled for college games.

No Glory in Defeating Redskins.

While a university football team is loathe to be defeated by the Indians, at the same time there is no honor for a university in defeating them. They are in no conference and play no regular football schedule, being merely nomads that play where they can.

The game Saturday did not help Nebraska in her race for the Missouri Valley Championship. On the contrary it has weakened us. Not seri-

D. H. Squires of Ord was a campus visitor this week.

Cornell University recently was made a gift of approximately $4,000,000 from Col. Oliver H. Payne of New York.

The U. S. biological survey is making arrangements with the biological department of Nebraska to establish a joint survey of the state, definite plans for such a union will be perfected soon.

Mr. C. T. Moore, who spent the summer on the United States Geological Survey in Alaska with Mr. Henry Eakin as chief, returned to the University last week to resume his graduate work.

The library of the Department of Geology is in receipt of five reports on the Geology of Alaska by Mr. Henry M. Eakin, a former student and assistant in the Department of Geology, and now a member of the United States Geological Survey.

Mr. Montrose L. Lee, a former student in the University of Nebraska, later an instructor in the Department of Geology in the University of Arizona, then in the University of New Mexico, a Fellow in Columbia University, and later a professional mining engineer, is now Geologist of the Uruguay Geological Survey at Montevideo.

The collection of skulls recently secured in an excavation in Plattsmouth by Mr. R. W. Ellis and Mr. Robert F. Gilder, have been placed on exhibition on the fourth floor of the State Museum. The skulls number fifty-eight in all. They were piled together and many of them were broken into small pieces. The skulls have been reconstructed by Mr. Ellis.
